New Look in Logging

The forest industry must meet the challenge of changing public opinion on forest land use to avoid a social and economic disaster in B.C., the deputy minister of forests said Monday.

J. S. Stokes told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Forestry that the B.C. government has been forcing the industry into higher utilization of timber and is prepared to enforce broader use of forest land.

But he said man "must be prevented from accelerating the waste of nature — perhaps to the point of his own destruction — and here the impact of industrial use of our natural resources cannot be underestimated," Stokes said.

ENVIRONMENT

"It is really a question of how far we are willing to allow mankind's activities to alter the environment," he said. "Man is creating an imbalance in nature's process and we must decide on some sound counterbalancing measures."

Stokes said the provincial government is looking for "general and total use" of forest land consistent with public requirements for social and economic needs, at the same time remaining cognizant of the need for environ- of the standard of living people want, and to get that quality we are going to have to alter our priorities," he said.

Stokes said he has no quarrel with the attitude and sense of responsibility being shown by the forest industry as a whole. "But," he said, "we must allow for the fact that some part of industry's acceptance of the changing situation may be identified as educated self-interest."

He said the demand for wood will have quadrupled by the year 2000. "Among the cardinal requirements will be the development of our ability to satisfy the apparent needs of industrial and economic progress, coupled with those required to meet the new mental protection."

"Economic ambitions are having to give way to social realities. The quality of the environment is an indication standards demanded by the general public in terms of social progress and a revised quality of life," he said.

IMPORTANT FACT

Stokes said an important fact to the forest industry is that "we are becoming increasingly stringent in our pollution control demands."

"Our forest inventory and forest land base is a shrinking base because of the necessary environmental protection and integrated use policies being adopted," he said. "This obviously means there must be an off-setting factor of increased productivity by the forest industry — both in terms of timber available and utilization of timber on the remaining base.

"We are committed to close utilization of our forest land which conceivably could double the annual allowable cut to nearly three and one-half billion cubic feet," he said.

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A fund for a teen-age girl who police say was blinded so she could not identify a person she saw taken a record player and tape recorder climbed to $37,392 Monday. Police said Wilma Chestnut, 13, was choked into unconsciousness and her eyes were slashed with a piece of broken glass. Donations continue to come in from all over the world.

169 Donors Still Needed

Another clinic will be held tonight at 6:30 at Red Cross House, 1048 Fort, and officials hope 169 donors will turn up to bring the two-day quota to 250 persons.

On Monday 91 persons donated blood — 34 short of the day's quota.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the blood clinic will be held at the University of Victoria, Student Union Building, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Ending Pollution Expensive

The deputy minister of the federal department of the environment said Monday he believes science and engineering can manage the ills man has created with pollution, but that it will cost money.

"I am convinced that people will not accept a real reduction in the standard of living to achieve an improved environment," Robert F. Shaw told delegates to the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Forestry.

"So, we must add a new factor to industrial design — environmental design," he said. "And we must measure cost against benefit."

"I believe that mankind is threatened by a deteriorating environment and that time is running out," Shaw said.

Among the problems he listed were air, water and soil pollution, over-population, decline of wildlife populations, lack of clean water and destruction of deltas and valleys by hydroelectric dams.

BIGGEST SEWER

Shaw said that about seven years ago, man started to realizes the significance of the pollution problem.

"We began to hear those voices in the wilderness."

The "voices" were saying, he said, that the St. Lawrence River was the biggest sewer in the country; that Lake Erie was dead and Lake Ontario dying; that salmon were disappearing fr om the Saint John River and herring from the east and west coasts; that the Ottawa River was more than just muddy.

Shaw said the standard of living depends on power, "but we know that the control of water by a dam can destroy the whole balance of nature downstream."

He cited the Aswan Dam on Egypt as a "frightening example of silting, agricultural disaster and delta erosion.

SAVE DELTA

"But right here, at home, we are fighting a desperate battle to save the Peace-Athabasca delta and its population of fish, wildlife and humans from the effects of the ponding behind the Peace River Dam," he said.

The head waters of a dam can destroy the beauty and resources of its valleys, can destroy life by interfering with fish migration, eliminating spawning grounds, changing water temperatures, destroying food organisms and increasing the amount of nitrogen in solution in the water.

Shaw pointed out Canada's contribution to the overall pollution picture. Of an estimated 500 million metric tons of pollutants deposited in the earth's atmosphere each year, this country is probably responsible for about five per cent. "We are real record breakers on a per capita basis," he said.

The U.S., he said, accounts for 220 million metric tons of pollutants each year through automobiles alone.

But the blame cannot be placed on any specific nation.

"There is no such thing as separatism — politically, financially, nationally or internationally — in the fight to improve and enhance our environment," Shaw said.

DECLINE

If problems caused by pollution are not met with vigor and intelligence, "mankind will decline, as other species have declined."

"Our approach to the problem should be selfish," he said. "We should manage our environment for the well-being of ourselves."

"We should not interfere with the progress and prosperity of any individual, unless, by so doing, we provide a greater benefit to many others."

Shaw criticized people who protest the killing of baby seals in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

"Beware of those that seek publicity for themselves by exploiting the modern fad of protest," he said. "They protest the killing of baby seals but don't protest the killing of baby cows.

"They go right ahead eating meat and wearing leather but protest the sale of any leather that has fur on it," he said.

"Seals are our competitors for fish. We must guard against losing our judgment."

A similar problem exists, he said, with the numbers of animals protected in national parks.

"Did you know that some of those cute animals you see in our parks are actually starving to death? There are too many of them."

Shaw said nuclear power might become Canad'a cleanest source of power and heat, despite the dangers of illness and mutations from a radioactive spill or leak.

Thermal pollution, he said, has become a problem which could even threaten the north.

He said a nuclear plant using 500,000 gallons of cooling water per minute, would raise the temperature of all that water by 20 degrees Fahrenheit, with disastrous effects to life along the shorelines.

Queen's Visit 'Freezes' Feud

ANKARA (AP) — The Queen's state visit to Turkey seems to have brought a temporary halt to political feuding among the country's leaders.

Premier Nihat Erim told reporters after the Queen arrived Monday that feuding factions had "frozen" the political crisis until she leaves Oct. 25.

After the British royal party leaves, he said, "either we will reach a compromise or I will resign."

Erim and his army-backed government and conservative politicians have been involved in a running dispute over the premier's proposed social and economic reforms.

HOME GARDEN

Identification A Problem

By HILDA BEASTALL

While digging the ground in preparation for planting something new in fall, one often comes across nests of bulbs. At this time they will have clusters of short new white roots which identify them as spring flowering bulbs.

Especially in a garden recently taken by a new owner, these bulbs pose two problems: What are they? What shall I do with them now?

Neighbors may be quick to tell you the garden had always been full of spring bulbs, but are less than likely to be more specific.

If you have ready a prepared strip or patch of ground that is well drained in winter, it will be a good idea to plant the bulbs you unavoidably dig up now into this place.

Keep the bulbs in their clusters with all the soil attached and replant each group at once before the tiny hair roots (which you cannot see) dry out in the air. Put them in with about three inches of soil above the tips.

Unless you are familiar with all types of spring bulbs from constant handling at all stages of growth, it is more than a little difficult to identify those you discover in a garden new to you.

In your own established garden you remember, hazily at least, that daffodils were here, and tulips over there.

But what are all these little things?

For a newcomer to gardening, transplanting into a separate patch of ground now will mean identification in spring when flowering. Replanting can be done next fall where wanted.

Daffodils and other narcissi have light gold colored, scaly coats and are now likely to have also white growth tips showing at the top of the bulbs.

The bulbs may be of any size or shape, according to variety and age, in groups or as singles.

The only similar bulb in appearance is the fall blooming yellow Sternbergia lutea, whose top growth will be much more advanced since it blooms in late October into November.

Tulips have dark brown coats all in one piece (not scaly). Small bulbs are completely detached, although in the same grouping.

Crocuses, all kinds—fall, winter or spring—have netted (or reticulate) coverings, and are corms rather than bulbs. Color is light brown.

Large white scaly bulbs often with purple base markings, are likely to be hyacinths; while pure white small scaly bulbs may be any of the spring blooming scillas, ipheions, muscari or chionodoxas.

Whatever you dig up in your preparations, be sure they are back into soil as quickly as possible, without damage or drying of those precious roots.

Wife Going Along

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Richard Nixon has confirmed that she will be going with the president on his trips to the Soviet Union and China.

"Oh, sure," she replied when asked if she plans to make the trip to Moscow in May. She said she will join the president when he visits mainland China before May.

Karpin on Bridge

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal features a recurring position that is frequently mishandled by the non-expert player. If a reason could be assigned for the mishandling, it would be that one has the instictive impulse to win as many tricks as possible. The expert has learned to suppress this instinct, for he appreciates that the safety of his contract is the prime consideration; and he never tries to make an extra trick if, in so trying, he jeopardizes his contract. This deal is a case in point.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1♣	Pass	3-NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♡.

South's response of three notrump was the "book" bid it showed a hand with which South, had he been the first to speak, would have been opened with one notrump.

On West's opening heart lead East put up the ten, which South captured with his queen. The queen of clubs was then led, and the finesse taken against West's hoped-for king. When East's king took this trick, the eight of hearts was returned, entrapping South's K-7. West now cashed five heart tricks and declarer was down two.

Had declarer looked ahead — before playing to the first trick — he would have recognized that if West possessed the club king, the sailing would be smooth and pleasurable. In this case, declarer would bring home six club tricks by repeated finesses.

The "worry" on the hand should have been that East possessed the club king. And since declarer knew that he was going to take a club finesse, there wasn't a thing he could do about preventing East from making his club king, if East had that key card. But what declarer could have attempted to do was to prevent East from returning a heart.

He could have accomplished this by permitting East to win the opening lead. East would then play back the heart eight, South would put up his queen, and West's ace would win. South would now be home.

The question might be raised: "What if East had three hearts?" In this case, when East returned a heart at trick two, West would allow South's queen to win. When East later obtained the lead with his club king, the return of his remaining (theoretical) third heart would defeat declarer.

This is quite true. But, then, if East had a third heart, by proper defensive play declarer would always be defeated, whether he won the opening lead, or didn't. By correct play, declarer would always make his contract if the contract were makable.

Mayor Hits Septic Tank Ruling

Mayor Jim Cumming of North Saanich is determined to stand up for old age pensioners living in Deep Cove whose septic tanks do not meet metro health board standards.

* * *

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, chief medical officer for Greater Victoria, ruled last week that a new health inspector will clamp down on unsanitary conditions in this area.

"I must defend those older residents from the arbitrary man with a rule book," said Cumming.

Two years ago, explained the mayor, tests were conducted by the health board and as a result the municipality of North Saanich was told residents under the nuisance to take action against certain bylaw.

"I pointed out at that time that Whitbread had full authority to take action but he did nothing," said Cumming, who feels that the survey did not provide positive evidence of water pollution.

"If there is in fact an offence we will have to do something about it but we are not going to tear down someone's home," he said.

Some residences are classified as non-conforming, said Cumming, because they were built in Deep Cove long before the district was organized. But North Saanich can not legislate against this situation, added the mayor.

Rural Group Urges Control of Planning

A newly formed group in the unorganized areas west of Victoria wants zoning and planning powers for the Colwood, Metchosin and Langford territories but without municipal status.

The Glangeolme (Langford, Colwood, Metchosin) Chamber of Community Opinion has sent letters to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and to the Capital Regional District Board, which now controls zoning and planning in the unorganized territory, requesting that a referendum be held in December to decide whether residents want this degree of independence.

100 MEMBERS

"We think we represent the opinion of this area and we want to prove it by this referendum," said president pro tem Aubrey Jenkins in an interview.

He said his organization since its inception in August has 100 members and is shooting for 1,000 in an area that now has almost 20,000 residents and is growing faster than any municipality in Greater Victoria.

"We don't want a village at this time," Jenkins was quick to add, because "of the heavy headaches" municipal responsibilities bring on. "But we do want semi-village status."

"I suspect this is one or two people on an ego trip, with possibly a few followers," Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, chairman of the regional board, said. "But I don't know that for sure yet."

He said he would comment on the proposal after he discusses it with region officials this week. But he did say that the group would have to have "very good reason" to have the region abdicate the responsibilities handed to it by the provincial government.

Campbell's office said that a meeting will be arranged with the Glangeolme Chamber.

WELFARE FEAR

Jenkins pointed out that the last incorporation referendum in the unorganized territories was convincingly defeated in 1969, and contended that the main fear now towards any new movement to incorporation centres around welfare costs.

Because the area is "a little cheaper" to live in, it is "saddled with welfare cases."

The provincial government now absorbs the area's welfare costs and Jenkins says that many residents fear the mill rate will soar if the area becomes incorporated.

A provincial welfare spokesman said an up-to-date picture of the welfare situation is hard to determine but statistics for March, 1970, indicate the unorganized territories are a distant second to Victoria in welfare cases.

During that month the unorganized territory had 44 cases per thousand population, compared to Victoria's 68, Esquimalt's 34, Saanich's 24 and Oak Bay's 6.

The spokesman said, however, that each municipality pays the same per capita rate for welfare. He said he wouldn't predict whether incorporation would bring a higher welfare cost to the unorganized territory but "they would have a formalized bill."

The average mill rate for the unorganized territory — it varies from one to five mills from area to area — is 42, which includes the provincial government levy for roads, the education mill rate, and the regional board levy for planning, building inspection and some recreation projects.

MORE SERVICES

This compares to Victoria's 77.43 mill rate, which, of course, covers many more services than the unorganized territory has, from sidewalks to parks and sewage systems.

Jenkins said if the territory was allowed its own zoning controls, the idea would be to take over the present regional board offices in Langford but still receive the other services from the board.

McKinnon Refuses to Retract —No Trustee 'Slur' Intended

Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon refused at Monday night's board meeting to withdraw a statement which two trustees said cast a slur on members of the board.

Trustees Dr. Philip Ney and Walter Donald took exception to a statement by McKinnon after a special board meeting set for Sept. 27 was cancelled for lack of a quorum. Ney quoted McKinnon as saying trustees who did not attend did not think enough about their oath of office as trustees to attend the meeting.

TOO LATE

The meeting was intended to discuss strategy at the annual convention of the B.C. School Trustees Association which was held later that week. Four trustees — McKinnon, Peter Bunn, Dr. Carron Jameson and Mrs. Daphne Temple — attended the meeting.

DONALD
. . . took exception

Ney arrived too late to stop cancellation according to the board's bylaws. Dr. Harold Knight, Donald, Dr. Victor Rogers and Dr. Donald Shorting — who had recently broken his leg — were absent.

"I doubt very much that I shall retract that statement," McKinnon said. "It was intended as a compliment to those trustees who were there, not a slur on those who weren't there."

Donald said he considered McKinnon's statement "uncharacteristic", and agreed with Ney that it implies a slur on those trustees absent.

McKinnon replied that it would have been better for those trustees who could not make it to the meeting to telephone a message of their absence. He said he received one such phone call.

Ney asked that McKinnon record that he did not intend a slur on trustees, but no such action was taken.

"I do not feel obliged to retract that statement," McKinnon said. "You (Ney) are inferring something in it which you are entitled to infer."

Donald said trustees who did not attend "have been done a discredit" by McKinnon's remark and said he hoped not much attention would be drawn to the situation.

Ney said "it does nobody service to point the finger and imply that a trustee is not doing his job. I agree with Trustee Donald that this does a disservice to those who weren't here."

McKinnon said that when a person runs for public office, "he should acquaint himself with the demands of that office and should not expect to be able to change those demands after he is elected."

"I think the statement stands for itself fairly well," he said.

The discussion was ended with a motion from Jameson to discontinue.

BLAZE DAMAGE $2,000

Damage is estimated at $2,000 in a Monday night apartment suite fire at the Madrona Manor apartments, 1955 Ashgrove, deputy chief Carl Coates said today.

Coates said the blaze was confined to the chesterfield and carpet in the suite of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Krieg.

He said the tenants were out at the time of the blaze, about 10:30 p.m. There was smoke damage to other parts of the suite and the apartment hall.

Forestry Men Accused Of Gross Exaggeration

The B.C. forest industry was accused today of grossly exaggerating conservationists' proposals, seeking to include three Nitinat lakes in the Pacific Rim National Park and the widening of the Port Renfrew-Bamfield west coast trail.

"The forest industry is incessantly engaged in mud slinging tactics," said Rick Careless, president of the Victoria Chapter of the Sierra Club. "It speaks more for effect than accuracy."

He was referring to statements made by Gordon L. Draeseke at the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Forestry at the Empress Hotel Monday.

Draeseke indicated that conservationists are attempting to remove an additional 64,000 acres of forest land for park purposes and to preserve the area as a wilderness area.

He also said the proposed additional park area is almost impossible to traverse and would benefit few people.

"The Sierra Club is requesting 13,000 acres of land — the watershed of Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum Lakes — plus the widening of the trail where necessary," said Careless. "We have compromised, but Draeseke completely ignores this fact."

He also said the area had a "tremendous recreational potential" and is situated only a three-hour drive from Victoria and Nanaimo.

Careless also took Draeseke to task for assuming that the government could not convert the Tsusiat-Hobitan-Squalicum forest area from logging to recreation.

"This entire area is Crown-owned (public property)," he said. It's high time that the privately-operated forest industries realized that it is not their land."

He also noted that the area is unique — the last remaining watershed that is still virgin on the south half of Vancouver Island.

Ten thousand people in Victoria alone have endorsed preserving the area as a park and the technical advisory board of the capital region also support the proposal, he points out.

"Don't think that if the area is preserved it will only be the playground of a few," he said. "Future generations will have the opportunity to see a remaining specimen of something that our age has elsewhere destroyed."

Howard English, a director of B.C. Wildlife Federation, said the land had a higher value for recreational use than for forestry.

"People are pouring a lot of money into recreation," he said. "The demand for wilderness area—unspoiled land—is increasing throughout North America"

Five Weeks Before Quaffers Get Their New Glasses

It will be at least another five weeks before beer drinkers get the bigger draught glass to hold the amount of beer they have been paying an extra nickle for since Sept. 1.

A B.C. Hotel Association spokesman said today a shipment of 420,000 new glasses is due to arrive Nov. 15 and to be in Vancouver hotels and beverage rooms on Nov. 29. She didn't know whether this would also be the date for the rest of B.C.

Association president Jim Vernon, who was unavailable for comment today, had said in mid-September that the new glasses would be out near the end of October.

He attributed the delay to the fact that a strike at the glass factory in Wallaceburg, Ont., had just ended. The same reason was cited today for the further delay.

Before Sept. 1, British Columbia Liquor Control Board regulations stipulated that eight ounces of beer were to be in 11-ounce glasses for a price of 20 cents.

At present this 11-ounce glass is supposed to contain nine ounces for a price of 25 cents. The new glasses will be of a 12-ounce size.

A Times survey of beer drinkers after the changeover indicated that some felt that there was the same amount of beer in the glasses after the price was up.

Extra Bus Run to Sooke

An extra run Friday evenings that will allow Sooke residents to spend more time in downtown Victoria has been added to the schedule of Sooke Stages Ltd.

A bus will leave Sooke at 6:30 p.m. and leave Victoria at 11:15 p.m. on the return journey. During the period between it will make two runs to Langford, one at 7:30 p.m. and one at 9:30 p.m.

Announcement of the new schedule was made Monday by James Golightly, formerly of Vancouver, who took over from the previous owner of the bus company, Roy Montgomery, July 1.

Golightly, who has replaced three of the five-bus fleet with new vehicles, says he plans to also expand his charter business.

IF A VIRUS COULD BE transferred by telephone, I would gladly share what remains of mine with a caller who has just spent a quarter of an hour telling me that the country is on the skids. Anyone so preoccupied with doom-crying needs a dash of personal tribulation to distract his thoughts. And for that purpose, nothing can beat the common cold.

This nuisancy affliction knows neither time nor season, rhyme nor reason. The healthy-living aren't immune to it. It circulates from year to year in the classrooms of the young, and sets the old to sneezing.

And though its start isn't predictable, this you can count on: whether it's light or heavy, and no matter what easements you apply, it is going to run its course.

That isn't a happy thought, especially for the person with a cold coming on. When my wife and I faced a new day with sore throats about a week ago, we decided that we couldn't possibly be catching colds. Obviously, the trouble lurked elsewhere.

We began to cast around for possible explanations. I suggested it might be the Mackenzie Highway dust that our car still releases when a bump or a pothole jounces it.

"Or maybe it was something we both ate," my dear one speculated.

That struck me as a reasonable conclusion.

"I'll bet it was the pepperoni," I said.

We'd bought half a yard of the hell-fire sausage in a country store to sustain us through a day's ramble on the backroads. Win brought out the foot or so remaining, and we inspected it suspiciously.

There lay the culprit, we agreed, and the place for it was in the garbage.

That was a hasty decision, as we learned when our son pulled in at the end of the day. He had a sore throat, a headache, and no illusions about what had hit him.

"When a cold is going around," he said, "a teacher is a sitting duck."

So, I've noted, is practically everyone else. Perhaps a hermit on a desert isle, far removed from any contact with humanity, has a sporting chance to escape the nuisancy infection. But the infallible preventive has yet to be found, and if one virus doesn't get you, the chances are that the next one will.

I don't like to sound despairful, and perhaps tireless research will eventually come up with what ascorbic acid, vaccines and the leaf of the rare Chinese ginko tree have failed to deliver. This is a surefire gimmick that will head off or knock out the common cold . . . and it can't come too soon for the victim who is forced to recognize those first unwelcome symptoms.

Until such a wonder-cure does materialize, the philosophy I apply to the visitation that descends on me each year or two is direct and simple. It is based on the acceptance of two basic facts.

The first is that the person who insists on remaining vertical through a head cold isn't a hero but merely a germ-spreading nuisance who deserves the dark looks he gets.

The second is that I might just as well squeeze all the enjoyment I can out of my misery.

So, if at all possible, I put myself out of circulation with a pile of old outdoors magazines, binoculars to observe anything that may pass in the straits or roost in the trees, a box of tissues, and a supply of honey-and-lemon.

To make this homely placebo, squeeze the juice of lemon into jug, mug or glass, add a generous dollop of honey, and stir briskly. It may occur to you as you do so that a jigger of whisky and a dash of hot water would add to the soothing qualities of the mix.

Luckily at our place, colds when we get 'em don't develop at the same speed. I was up and about before Win's reached misery-stage, and Ron didn't surrender to his until later still.

None of us suffered the slightest loss of appetitite — it would take more than a common cold to bring that about — and we were sufficiently recovered to spare sympathy to a friend who dropped in last night.

He had a slight headache, and this puzzling little tickle in his throat. Could he be catching something?

Storm Socks City

The first storm of the season pummelled the British Columbia coast Monday night and this morning with gale-force winds reaching their peak shortly after midnight when gusts of 67 miles an hour were recorded at Gonzales Hill.

The storm drove three vessels onto rocks and left an aftermath of power failures, telephone outages and driveways blocked with fallen tree limbs.

A crew of 12 B.C. Hydro linemen worked through the night to restore power in many parts of Greater Victoria with the hardest-hit area being Cordova Bay.

The coast guard cutter Racer went to the rescue of a fish boat that was swept onto the rocks at Broken Island, halfway between Campbell River and Alert Bay at 11:30 Monday. Her owner was taken off and landed at Alert Bay.

This morning, five vessels, including the Racer, were standing by another fish boat that was holed by rocks at Hansen Island, across from Alert Bay, at 4:45 a.m.

FIVE PEOPLE

A 40-foot ketch with five people aboard hit a reef on De Courcy Island. She was eventually pulled free by a tug from Ladysmith.

Chief weather officer Allan McQuarrie reports that the storm, which had been heading toward the Washington coast, veered, and gathered force and swept over Vancouver Island.

"It picked up speed dramatically," he said, "giving the Island a full blast overnight."

During the night the barometer dropped to 29.03.

Switching direction early this morning, the wind abated for a while then built up until southwesterlies, blowing at 40 miles an hour, reached gust peaks of 57 miles an hour.

Protests Growing In Kosygin Tour

GREENPEACE CREW INVITED TO JUNEAU

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace protest mission has switched its homeward bound schedule and accepted an invitation to visit Juneau, state capital of Alaska.

Mrs. Dorothy Metcalfe, communications contact for the 12-member protest group, said Monday they were invited to Juneau by a state legislative member, Ed Maughton, while en route home from a voyage to protest a planned U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island.

The group began its voyage Sept. 17 to protest a planned U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island.

The group had originally planned to sail for Prince Rupert from Kodiak, Alaska. They had been expected to reach home by the end of the month.

Demonstrators By the Busload

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Demonstrations against Premier Alexei Kosygin were growing today and there were indications that the visiting Russian would face protesters throughout his Canadian tour.

A human barricade of police, two deep in places, cordoned off an entire block surrounding the Soviet Embassy as thousands of Jewish demonstrators gathered in nearby Strathcona Park.

Police had counted 110 busloads from Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and other points, with more coming, as a 1½-mile protest march was to begin.

A convoy of 55 buses from Montreal was stopped three times by Quebec police and searched after reports that some protesters had bombs. None was found.

Meanwhile, small groups of protesters continued to pop up everywhere Kosygin went.

The RCMP and the Soviet KGB security force appeared to have redoubled their efforts to avert another incident. The 67-year-old premier was nearly bowled over by a young person Monday.

Strathcona Park is about 100 yards from the Soviet Embassy. Organizers said 7,000 to 9,000 protesters were in the park and more were coming as those there sang and listened to speeches.

Cries of "let my people go" and "free Soviet Jewry" could be heard blocks away. But organizers continued to emphasize that the demonstration would be peaceful.

The route dictated by police wouldn't mean any contact with Mr. Kosygin, who had lunch at the Rideau Club across from Parliament Hill, then was to visit a pulp and paper mill at Gatineau, Que.

Earlier today police prevented a young American woman

Province Vetoes Welfare Raises

The provincial government has turned down a substantial increase in welfare rates provincial boards of review in Vancouver recommended be given to two families.

However, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said today he is willing to meet representatives of two Vancouver welfare review boards which failed to win increased assistance rates, but the minister offered no hope that he would alter department policy on welfare payments.

The cases involve Mrs. Toni Cowlishaw, a mother of six daughters, who won a review board decision that her monthly welfare rate be raised from $341 a month to $491, and Mrs. Jean Amos, a mother of two, who was permitted an increase from $181 to $274.

Peter Davies, chairman of the Cowlishaw review board, said he received a letter Monday from J. A. Sadler, the director of the department of rehabilitation and social improvement, saying:

"I am not prepared to implement the decision as I consider it to be contrary to departmental policies."

Davies, a community worker with the First United Church, said Mrs. Cowlishaw's welare money was increased because her family was being deprived of a "normal and healthy existence."

Davies and Prof. William Black, chairman of the Amos board, said Monday they would reconvene their boards to determine whether to press the mothers' cases further.

In an interview from Vancouver, Gaglardi said appeal boards have no power to force higher welfare payments.

Surcharge May Be Lifted On Selective Basis—U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Treasury Secretary John B. Connally says the United States would "consider" lifting the 10-per-cent import surtax on a "selective basis."

A statement issued Monday by the treasury department said selective "could mean a country by country basis and-or a product-by-product basis."

The statement was issued in response to a number of queries that arose from a midnight news conference which Connally gave Friday in a Hot Springs, Va., hotel lobby after a speaking engagement.

Meanwhile, in Paris officials from western nations were meeting with spokesmen from the United States in an effort to sort out trade differences. See story on Page 2.

ERRONEOUS REPORTS

A report in European newspapers that Connally and West German Finance Minister Karl Schiller had agreed in principle two weeks ago to exempt West Germany from the surcharge were termed "completely erroneous" by the treasury. The statement added:

"Connally said in an impromptu news conference in Hot Springs last Friday night that the West Germans 'have much on their side' when they suggest they are entitled to have the surcharge removed from their products.

COMMON FRONT

"In his news conference the secretary also noted that the group of six Common Market countries has indicated it wants to negotiate as a common front with the U.S., but that members of the six apparently have not reached agreement among themselves on their position."

Denmark today imposed an additional levy on imports to help it out of its balance-of-payments difficulties.

Finance Minister Henry Bruenbaum told parliament the surcharge would be in force until March, 1973, and would have three phases — first at 10 per cent, then at seven per cent, effective June, 1972, and at four per cent for the last three months.

Kosygin Reacts Coolly To Arctic Control Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin reacted coolly today to a Canadian proposal for an international treaty on navigation safety and pollution control in the Arctic.

Canadian sources said the idea, advanced as Mr. Kosygin and Prime Minister Trudeau formally conferred for the second time in two days, drew less than a "wholehearted" response.

Elaborating, the sources said the premier's reaction was "somewhat of a repetition" of the position he took when Mr. Trudeau proposed a variation of the same idea in Moscow in May.

At that time, Mr. Kosygin made clear that the Soviet Union is not interested at present in a multilateral regime for problems of the Arctic.

U.S. CONSULTED

Canada's plan, worked out in close consultation with the United States, called for an international conference to write controls into international law.

The Soviets feared that a multilateral approach might undermine Russia's own claim to sovereignty in the Soviet Arctic.

To get around this objection, Mr. Trudeau today proposed that a treaty be worked out by countries with interests in the Arctic, without the benefit of a conference. The treaty could then be thrown open for signature by other states.

Though showing little enthusiasm for the idea, Mr. Kosygin promised that his government would take it under consideration.

DISCUSS TRADE

Today's 2¼-hour talk between Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Trudeau concentrated on bilateral issues affecting Canadian-Soviet relations, though the two also dealt for a time with international questions left over from Monday.

Much of the discussion was taken up with trade and economic matters. The two leaders agreed the industrial exchanges agreement between Canada and the U.S.S.R. signed early this year is working well.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, one of a number of cabinet ministers who sat in on the talks, expressed concern about intensive fish-harvesting operations by foreign fleets, including Soviet, off Canada's east and west coasts.

Mr. Davis said Canada would like to see the problem dealt with on an international basis.

Mr. Kosygin said the Soviet government will consider the matter.

Officials said today's exchange of views was "solidly business-like and serious" and there was no evidence that Monday's attack on Mr. Kosygin by a Parliament Hill demonstrator had affected the progress of talks.

"It was an easy exchange, good dialogue back and forth," said one official.

EXCHANGE TOASTS

Monday night, Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Trudeau exchanged champagne toasts to Soviet-Canadian friendship at a glittering banquet capping Mr. Kosygin's first, event-filled day in Canada's capital.

The dinner was attended by about 200 persons in the ornate Confederation Room of

Free Vote Rejected

LONDON (CP) — A demand that the Labor Opposition allow a free vote on the crucial Common Market entry issue was rejected by the socialist Parliamentary party today as Harold Wilson sought to prevent a split in party ranks.

First reports indicated that the socialists defeated market supporters in their own party by 150 to 111 to reject the free vote move.

The final Labor strategy on the six-day Common Market debate to end with the critical Oct. 28 vote is to be set by the Opposition Chief Whip Bob Mellish Thursday.

However, the size of the force demanding the free vote — which Prime Minister Heath has already yielded for his own Tory party—indicated there may still be a Labor split Oct. 28 unless Wilson provides some last-minute compromise.

'I Fed Him Coffee and Kept Talking'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year-old airline stewardess on her first flight has been credited with the safety of an Alaskan airlines crew and 31 passengers hijacked at gunpoint to Vancouver Monday.

Nancy Davis of Seattle, who joined Wien Consolidated Airlines in Anchorage, Alaska, two weeks ago, said she was "very frightened" throughout the ordeal, "but I just fed him coffee and tried to keep him talking as much as I could."

The suspect is expected to be deported to Alaska to face charges of air piracy.

Miss Davis said the hijacker first approached her to ask where the washroom was, shortly after the flight left Anchorage for Bethel, Alaska, about 5:30 a.m.

CONFRONTED WITH GUN

"I was up front in the galley when he came out. He walked up and stuck a gun in my face and said: 'We're not going to Bethel.' He said he was hijacking the plane.

"I told him not to say such things, but then he demanded I take him into the cockpit. I told him it was locked and that because I was a junior stewardess I didn't have a key."

She said at that point she rang the cockpit on an intercom system, indicating an emergency to the pilot, Captain Don Peterson, through a code system.

IN AIR 25 MINUTES

Captain Peterson, 43, of Fairbanks, Alaska, said this occurred about 25 minutes after the flight left Anchorage.

"He started banging on the door when we first refused to let him in," Captain Peterson said, adding that finally the door was opened.

"He came in and demanded that we head south. We discussed the range of the aircraft and its fuel and agreed that we would return to Anchorage to refuel and disembark passengers."

Captain Peterson said the hijacker stayed in a cabin just behind the cockpit with his gun pointed to Miss Davis's head.

"He always had his finger on the trigger," she said. "I asked him if he had real bullets in it and he took one out and showed it to me. But he assured me he had the safety catch on."

Captain Peterson said the hijacker asked to go to Havana after leaving Anchorage for Vancouver.

"I told him we could make Mexico City from Vancouver and that seemed to satisfy him for a while, and that we would go on to Cuba from Mexico.

"As we got nearer Vancouver he seemed totally undecided as to what to do next."

ASKS FOR LIQUOR

Miss Davis said the hijacker asked her if there was any liquor on board and "I told him there wasn't any because it was a morning flight. Actually I lied because we had a full cupboard. So I gave him coffee and we talked. He said he was frightened about going back to jail."

Miss Davis said she understood from his statements that he had served time in Leavenworth prison on a murder charge.

"We talked about his different philosophies. He was very down on life, depressed. At one point he asked me what I was thinking about. I told him I was praying for him.

"He said no one had ever done that for him before. I said everybody needs some one to pray for you.

"Then he showed me pictures of his family. He kept telling me how calm I was. My stomach was practically upside down but I guess it didn't show."

HIJACKER DECIDED

Captain Peterson said that after the jet refuelled and had left Vancouver, "it was the hijacker's decision to return to Vancouver."

"I can only speculate that his reason was because he was frightened. It had something to do with an incident at Anchorage this morning before we left.

"Apparently he was accosted by security police at the airport, and they made reference to his past police record," Captain Peterson said.

"I don't really know why, but it was his decision to return. He had refused to talk with RCMP in Vancouver earlier, and had become very nervous afterward. He was totally undecided about what to do.

"And he was adamant about not landing in the U.S."

HE LIKED HER

Miss Davis said the hijacker "liked and trusted" her. "I'm sure he wouldn't have hurt me intentionally unless something made him upset.

"When he talked to me he seemed to calm down. I felt like crying when it was all over — like crying for him."

Asked whether she would continue her career as a stewardess, Miss Davis smiled and gave an emphatic, "Yes. But right now I'm hungry — no, make that starved. I haven't eaten a thing all day and I'm starved."

PILOT Don Peterson and stewardess Nancy Davis talk to reporters after landing in Vancouver.

FBI ACTION TRIGGERED DEATHS OF 3 PEOPLE

There are only two endings to air piracy for the crew of the commandeered plane . . . rescue or death.

While the crew of the Wien Consolidated Airlines jetliner today are safe after a hijacker gave himself up to the RCMP in Vancouver Monday . . . this wasn't the case earlier this month in Jacksonville, Fla., when FBI action resulted in the deaths of the pilot, a kidnap victim and the hijacker. Ont. Socreds Back Matrai

TORONTO (CP) — The Social Credit Party of Ontario will continue to support Gezi Matrai, its provincial election candidate in the Toronto High Park riding, the party president says.

Paul Fromm told an all-candidates meeting Monday night that Matrai "has guts and that's the kind of man we need in the legislature today."

Matrai, 27, was charged in Ottawa today with common assault in the attack Monday on Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin. He was remanded one week without plea.

"Our party cannot condone violence," Mr. Fromm said.

"What Matrai did has nothing to do with the Social Credit party of Ontario. He acted on his own behalf as a person and that's that."

Matrai still will be able to contest Thursday's Ontario election because the Legislative Assembly Act does not bar anyone from running for office or being elected by reason of a criminal charge or criminal record. However, persons in jail serving a sentence can neither vote nor run for office.

In a telephone interview from Edmonton Monday night, Matrai's mother said she was shocked.

NEVER TAUGHT HATE

"I never indoctrinated him that he should hate anyone—Russians or anyone," said Mrs. Matrai.

"I still love him. . . . But I don't think he did the right thing. . . ."

Mrs. Matrai said Geza was "just a boy" when the family escaped from Hungary when the Russians were putting down the 1956 Hungarian uprising.

She said no one in the family was killed but "those were extraordinary times, so this may have had an effect on him."

Mrs. Matrai said the family has not become involved with any political organizations in Canada and just wants to be left in peace.

Mrs. Matrai said she has heard little from her bachelor son since he left Edmonton 18 months ago to live in Toronto.

delivering a plea to Kosygin that she be reunited with her Russian husband.

Deborah BrackmaN Kremniov, 22, came from her home in Great Neck, N.Y., to plead her case. She married Valerii Ivanovitch Aug. 17 in Leningrad but he was drafted into the army and she left the country after being denied a residence permit.

In Vancouver Monday Mayor Tom Campbell agreed to have a petition from eight ethnic groups presented to Kosygin. The mayor met with representatives of Vancouver's Czechoslovakian, Estonian, Hungarian, Jewish, Latvian, Polish and Ukrainian communities, to discuss the Kosygin visit to Vancouver which starts Friday.

Back in Ottawa at Strathcona Park a ram's horn signalled the beginning of the march and the protesters formed up behind a group of rabbis and started up the hill, toward a semi-circle of several hundred police.

Young parade marshals formed a barrier in front of the police to ensure no contact with the protesters, who turned west onto Laurier Avenue as planned.

This was the tense moment in the schedule and it appeared there were no incidents.

Rabbi Meir Kahane of New York, leader of the Jewish Defence League, and six companions were turned back to New York Monday night after arrival by air in Montreal.

Before the march began, Rabbi Gunther Plaut of Toronto told the crowd:

"We are not a bomb-throwing group but I want everyone to know that we are a militant group.

"There was a time when we pleaded and begged — that time is gone . . . We stand up to demand justice — no pleading, no begging — we demand justice."

HOSPITALS URGED TO JOIN COUNCIL

The public now regards good health as a right and demands quick, safe and effective hospital care, the executive director of St. Joseph's Hospital told a Vancouver conference today.

HOTEL ASPECTS

Dr. Embert Van Tilburg told about 140 hospital board members from across the province some of them think their responsibility is mainly the "hotel" aspects of their hospital — seeing to such things as heat and light, food, laundry and finances.

That is only part of the heavy responsibility delegated by law to hospital boards as representatives of the public.

Every hospital in the province should seek accreditation, that is, submit to a survey to see if the care it offers meets the standards of the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation, he said.

About one half of the province's hospitals are now accredited by the council, including the large and medium sized ones, so about 70 per cent of hospital beds are in hospitals meeting the council's standards.

This means about 50 smaller hospitals are not accredited.

FORCE HAND

Van Tilburg said that unless those involved in operating hospitals make a greater effort to ensure all, or most, hospitals are accredited, "the government may force our hand."

This had already happened in the U.S. where only accredited hospitals are entitled to medicare and medic-aid payments.

"The Canadian Council of Accreditation is opposed to this compulsory and arbitrary method and feels that the patient is more likely to get optimal care if hospitals enter the program on a voluntary basis," he said.

Van Tilburg was speaking on maintaining quality of patient care at a seminar for B.C. hospital trustees held at the Vancouver hotel. He is chairman of the patient care committee of the BCHA which opens its annual conference Wednesday.

EVALUATION

He also said that unless a hospital's medical staff has a proper system of evaluation which produces objective, hard data, there can be nothing scientific about assurances to a hospital board from the chief of staff that hospital care is good.

"A continuous medical audit must be carried out by the physicians to evaluate the quality of medical care as reflected in the hospital's medical records.

"No wonder the Canadian Council on Hospital Accreditation is very particular that adequate documentation, promptly entered, be kept in the hospital. It is well understood that there is a direct relationship between good medical care and good documentation — good records are an essential part of good medical practice."

Parliament Hill's West Block, where Mr. Trudeau commended "the advantages to be gained from a constructive working relationship" between Canada and the Soviet Union.

Only about 10 hours after an assailant manhandled Mr. Kosygin on Parliament Hill, Mr. Trudeau drew attention to Canada's cultural diversity and said Canada supports minority groups in the preservation of their cultures.

"During the course of your visit here you may see evidence of the strongly-held views of some minorities," said Mr. Trudeau in a possible reference to the Hungarian-Canadian arrested in connection with the assault on Mr. Kosygin.

"As a government we support the right of all persons to express their opinions, but as a government and as a people we emphasize the transcending importance of courtesy, civility and genuine hospitality toward our guests."

HAVE MADE START

Canada and the Soviet Union have made an "extremely promising start along the road to increased co-operation," said the prime minister in proposing a toast.

He mentioned an agreement on science and technology signed by the two countries early this year, a protocol on consultations signed when Mr. Trudeau visited the Soviet Union in May, and a cultural exchanges agreement scheduled to be signed by the two heads-of-government here Wednesday.

Both countries were aware that true friendship, when once attained and if soundly based, "is strong enough to endure temporary differences and to emerge stronger for having been tested."

"Canada's long relationship with its oldest friends is proof to us that however uncertain may be the consequences from time to time of short-term events, the long run consists of a climate of understanding and co-operation."

At the same time, it was necessary to recognize that policy differences still persist between the Soviet Union and Canada.

LATE FOR DINNER

Mr. Kosygin, who was nearly an hour late arriving for the dinner, replied that "relations proper to good neighbors are becoming established between our states."

Noting that Soviet-Canadian co-operation now encompasses the political, economic, scientific, technical, cultural and other spheres, Mr. Kosygin said:

"The efforts of both sides are now directed towards lending this co-operation a firm, stable character . . . making it wider and more versatile."

Collaboration between the two countries was not directed against anyone.

"It merely serves . . . the cause of international peace. We have no hidden motives.

"If, however, countries conduct their external policies with the design of undermining the position of others, of infringing on their legitimate rights and interests, such a course can only aggravate present world tensions, make it more difficult to settle burning issues, and produce new focuses of crisis and conflict.

"No matter what words are used to cloak such a policy, its bankruptcy and the dangers it holds even for those countries which might attempt to implement it, will be revealed."

Dollar Talks Deadlocked

By BERNARD D. NOSSITER

PARIS (WP) — High level economic officials from the United States and other rich, non-communist nations Monday made another stab at settling their trade and monetary differences.

According to the carefully guarded accounts of participants, no progress was made on the first question before them: How big a swing from red ink to black does the United States require in its balance of payments?

This was the opening session of a three-day meeting among second-tier experts largely drawn from finance ministries and central banks. One official privately predicted that a continuation of the talks' present pace will lead nowhere.

Another, however, insisted that nothing could be expected from one day's work and that too much should not be read in Monday's deadlock.

The meetings here are part of a more or less continuous negotiation to reconstruct the shattered monetary and trading rules of the non-communist world.

The old order came apart on Aug. 15 when President Nixon cut the dollar loose from a fixed rate of exchange with other currencies and slapped a 10 per cent tax on imported goods.

Most western European nations and Japan are eager to return to a system of fixed rates at which currencies exchange for each other and to get rid of the import surcharge. But Washington has said this will not happen until the United States gains enlarged markets for its exports in two ways: making American products cheaper by making foreign currencies dearer and by reducing the tariff and other barriers now imposed against American goods.

Monday's meeting brought together the members of Working Party Three of the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, a study group of wealthy nations based in Paris.

They had informally agreed that their first order of business was determining the total size of the concessions to be made to the United States.

GONE NOWHERE

Treasury Secretary John Connally has said that Washington requires changes in exchange rates and trading practices that would produce a 13 billion dollar shift in the U.S. international accounts. The Europeans, backed by a study of the OECD, are replying that a swing of 8 to 9 billion dollars is enough.

Until this question is settled, and Monday's session is understood to have gone nowhere on this point, it will be very difficult to fix a new system of exhange rates. The experts do agree that each percentage point devaluation of the dollar or average upvaluation of one point in other currencies is worth about 800 million dollars to the American payments balance.

GREAT SECRECY

The officials are meeting under conditions of extraordinary secrecy. For the first time in the memory of veteran observers, reporters were barred from the Chateau de la Muette, the handsome headquarters of the OECD.

The participants were to meet again as Working Party Three today. The same group was due to gather this afternoon and Wednesday, styling themselves as the deputies of the Group of Ten. The ten nations referred to are France, Italy, Germany, Holland and Belgium of the Common Market, Sweden, Japan, Canada, Britain and the United States.

Pact Safeguards 'Not Essential'

Safeguards for the Canadian auto industry under the U.S.-Canada auto pact could be substantially altered without serious repercussions, the president of American Motors Canada Ltd. said here today.

"Ottawa may disagree with me," said William S. Pickett, 49, who has been president of the Canadian subsidiary since February.

Argument recently has centered on American insistence that Canada agree to abandon the safeguards which have been advantageous to Canada's auto manufacturing industry.

"No one dreamed they would be as advantageous as they have been," Picket said in an interview before addressing the Victoria Kiwanis Club at Empress Hotel.

He attributed the six years of auto pact operation with producing a $1 billion trade credit with the U.S., compared with a $600 million deficit before the pact as introduced in 1965.

But Pickett said elimination of the pact itself would mean the end of the auto industry in Canada.

With 60 per cent of the output of Canadian car plants exported, the trade pact is the only thing that makes palatable Canada's $500 million investment in the industry, Pickett said.

The pact is available to foreign auto makers as well as the U.S. industry, Pickett said. Trade with Japanese and Europeans may come to the point where they may be encouraged to build cars wholly in Canada.

Pickett was disturbed that in August 60.3 per cent of the cars sold in B.C. were imported from abroad, mainly Japan. "If this goes on we endanger the industry and we can't afford it," he said.

Dropping the 12 per cent federal sales tax would act as a powerful stimulus to the Canadian market for new cars. A 20 per cent increase in production would mean 120,000 vehicles and 30,000 new jobs for Canadians, he said.

. . . SURCHARGE

Bruenbaum, whose minority government under Prime Minister J. O. Krag came to power last month, said the surcharge would come into effect Wednesday. Goods already dispatched to Denmark would be exempt.

Denmark has a balance-of-payments deficit running at about $500 million and a net short-term foreign debt of more than $1 billion. Its foreign exchange reserves total about $415 million.

EMERGENCY COURT

In Washington, President Nixon sent to Congress today legislation calling for civil as well as criminal penalties; authority to control interest and dividends if needed and setting up a temporary emergency court of appeals to handle wage-price cases.

CIVIL PENALTY

The proposed legislation calls for the same $5,000 criminal fines now contained in the law and adds a civil penalty of $2,500 for violations, adding what officials said were more teeth to enforce the effort.

Fire Victims Doing Well

A Colwood father and son are in good condition in hospital with burns suffered when fire destroyed their home near Witty's Lagoon Monday night.

Norman Groves, 36, of 131 Cliff Drive, and his son, Wayne, 11, received burns to the hands.

Colwood volunteer firemen fought the blaze at the home into the early hours today.

Tree's Fate Unsure

Street widening planned by city hall to ease car traffic near the provincial government offices may only sacrifice one tree, aldermen were told today.

However, city staff were told by Mayor Courtney Haddock to try to save the tree.

The mature birch whose fate is in question stands on the grass boulevard at the southest corner of Government and Superior, blocking the way of a planned traffic lane.

Traffic engineer told council's B Committee the new lane will allow cars to travel east on Superior without waiting for others making left turns.

The birch will be extremely close to the curb and may have to be removed after a trial period.

Further widening at the corner of Superior and Government, next to Beacon Hill Park, was also approved by the committee.

EXPULSIONS URGED

BRUSSELS (Reuter) — Some NATO allies want the expulsion of a "significant number" of Soviet citizens following official confirmation of a Communist spy network operating in Belgium, informed sources said.

A foreign ministry statement Monday said Anatoly Tchebotarev, a Russian trade official who disappeared from Belgium more than two weeks ago, handed over a dossier on Soviet espionage activities in Belgium before asking for political asylum in the United States.

STEPS FOR HEALTH — 88-YEAR-OLD RETIRED DENTIST DR. JEROME G. HESS gave up his dentistry practice after 42 years because of his declining health in 1952.

Nine years later he started taking dancing lessons to get some regular exercise and ward off the aging process. It evidently worked. Last year Hess won a national foxtrot and tango title in Miami, Fla., and now—at the age of 88—is training hard to defend his title in April. "I'll be ready," promised the retired dentist, who has been going to Fred Astaire Studios twice a week for lessons since 1965.

CENTURIES OLD slice of Douglas fir from virgin forest of Vancouver Island is part of display this week by Canadian Institute of Forestry at the provincial museum. Three is 680 years old and was taken from Copper Canyon. Forestry researcher Ken Mitchell of Victoria stands alongside.

New Look in Logging

The forest industry must meet the challenge of changing public opinion on forest land use to avoid a social and economic disaster in B.C., the deputy minister of forests said Monday.

J. S. Stokes told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Forestry that the B.C. government has been forcing the industry into higher utilization of timber and is prepared to enforce broader use of forest land.

But he said man "must be prevented from accelerating the waste of nature — perhaps to the point of his own destruction — and here the impact of industrial use of our natural resources cannot be underestimated," Stokes said.

ENVIRONMENT

"It is really a question of how far we are willing to allow mankind's activities to alter the environment," he said. "Man is creating an imbalance in nature's process and we must decide on some sound counterbalancing measures."

Stokes said the provincial government is looking for "general and total use of forest land consistent with public requirements for social and economic needs, at the same time remaining cognizant of the need for environ- of the standard of living people want, and to get that quality we are going to have to alter our priorities," he said.

Stokes said he has no quarrel with the attitude and sense of responsibility being shown by the forest industry as a whole. "But," he said, "we must allow for the fact that some part of industry's acceptance of the changing situation may be identified as educated self-interest."

He said the demand for wood will have quadrupled by the year 2000. "Among the cardinal requirements will be the development of our ability to satisfy the apparent needs of industrial and economic progress, coupled with those required to meet the new mental protection."

"Economic ambitions are having to give way to social realities. The quality of the environment is an indication standards demanded by the general public in terms of social progress and a revised quality of life," he said.

IMPORTANT FACT

Stokes said an important fact to the forest industry is that "we are becoming increasingly stringent in our pollution control demands."

"Our forest inventory and forest land base is a shrinking base because of the necessary environmental protection and integrated use policies being adopted," he said. "This obviously means there must be an off-setting factor of increased productivity by the forest industry — both in terms of timber available and utilization of timber on the remaining base.

"We are committed to close utilization of our forest land which conceivably could double the annual allowable cut to nearly three and one-half billion cubic feet," he said.

Friends Help

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A fund for a teen-age girl who police say was blinded so she could not identify a person she saw taken a record player and tape recorder climbed to $37,392 Monday. Police said Wilma Chestnut, 13, was choked into unconsciousness and her eyes were slashed with a piece of broken glass. Donations continue to come in from all over the world.

169 Donors Still Needed

Another clinic will be held tonight at 6:30 at Red Cross House, 1048 Fort, and officials hope 169 donors will turn up to bring the two-day quota to 250 persons.

On Monday 91 persons donated blood — 34 short of the day's kuota.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, the blood clinic will be held at the University of Victoria, Student Union Building, from 9:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Ending Pollution Expensive

The deputy minister of the federal department of the environment said Monday he believes science and engineering can manage the ills man has created with pollution, but that it will cost money.

"I am convinced that people will not accept a real reduction in the standard of living to achieve an improved environment," Robert F. Shaw told delegates to the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Forestry.

"So, we must add a new factor to industrial design — environmental design," he said. "And we must measure cost against benefit."

"I believe that mankind is threatened by a deteriorating environment and that time is running out," Shaw said.

Among the problems he listed were air, water and soil pollution, over-population, decline of wildlife populations, lack of clean water and destruction of deltas and valleys by hydroelectric dams.

BIGGEST SEWER

Shaw said that about seven years ago, man started to realizes the significance of the pollution problem.

"We began to hear those voices in the wilderness."

The "voices" were saying, he said, that the St. Lawrence River was the biggest sewer in the country; that Lake Erie was dead and Lake Ontario dying; that salmon were disappearing from the Saint John River and herring from the east and west coasts; that the Ottawa River was more than just muddy.

Shaw said the standard of living depends on power, "but we know that the control of water by a dam can destroy the whole balance of nature downstream."

He cited the Aswan Dam on Egypt as a "frightening example of silting, agricultural disaster and delta erosion.

SAVE DELTA

"But right here, at home, we are fighting a desperate battle to save the Peace-Athabasca delta and its population of fish, wildlife and humans from the effects of the ponding behind the Peace River Dam," he said.

The head waters of a dam can destroy the beauty and resources of its valleys, can destroy life by interfering with fish migration, eliminating spawning grounds, changing water temperatures, destroying food organisms and increasing the amount of nitrogen in solution in the water.

Shaw pointed out Canada's contribution to the overall pollution picture. Of an estimated 500 million metric tons of pollutants deposited in the earth's atmosphere each year, this country is probably responsible for about five per cent. "We are real record breakers on a per capita basis," he said.

The U.S., he said, accounts for 220 million metric tons of pollutants each year through automobiles alone.

But the blame cannot be placed on any specific nation.

"There is no such thing as separatism — politically, financially, nationally or internationally — in the fight to improve and enhance our environment," Shaw said.

DECLINE

If problems caused by pollution are not met with vigor and intelligence, "mankind will decline, as other species have declined."

"Our approach to the problem should be selfish," he said. "We should manage our environment for the well-being of ourselves."

"We should not interfere with the progress and prosperity of any individual, unless, by so doing, we provide a greater benefit to many others."

Shaw criticized people who protest the killing of baby seals in the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

"Beware of those that seek publicity for themselves by exploiting the modern fad of protest," he said. "They protest the killing of baby seals but don't protest the killing of baby cows.

"They go right ahead eating meat and wearing leather but protest the sale of any leather that has fur on it," he said.

"Seals are our competitors for fish. We must guard against losing our judgment."

A similar problem exists, he said, with the numbers of animals protected in national parks.

"Did you know that some of those cute animals you see in our parks are actually starving to death? There are too many of them."

Shaw said nuclear power might become Canada's cleanest source of power and heat, despite the dangers of illness and mutations from a radioactive spill or leak.

Thermal pollution, he said, has become a problem which could even threaten the north.

He said a nuclear plant using 500,000 gallons of cooling water per minute, would raise the temperature of all that water by 20 degrees Fahrenheit, with disastrous effects to life along the shorelines.

Queen's Visit 'Freezes' Feud

ANKARA (AP) — The Queen's state visit to Turkey seems to have brought a temporary halt to political feuding among the country's leaders.

Premier Nihat Erim told reporters after the Queen arrived Monday that feuding factions had "frozen" the political crisis until she leaves Oct. 25.

After the British royal party leaves, he said, "either we will reach a compromise or I will resign."

Erim and his army-backed government and conservative politicians have been involved in a running dispute over the premier's proposed social and economic reforms.

Stabbing the Wrong Back

If Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Russia a few months ago was an expression of Canada's policy of independence in choosing friends and political and business relations in all parts of the world, regardless of the Iron, Bamboo or other curtains, then Premier Kosygin's current return visit to Canada — an unprecedented event — draws a heavy underline to the Canadian statement. It is because of the background nuances and issues that yesterday's attack on the Soviet visitor by a former Hungarian refugee from Russian oppression was all the more deplorable.

Apart from being a gross threat to the safety of the Soviet leader, the incident placed Canada in an invidious position. Moscow might well infer that we are either careless or incompetent in providing adequate police protection for controversial visitors, particularly when the presence of demonstrators had been widely advertised beforehand. The occurrence placed Mr. Trudeau in a depreciated position for talks on equal terms with Mr. Kosygin; it weakened his power to make requests; it lost face for Canada and its leader.

The fact that a demonstrator was able to get close enough to Mr. Kosygin to grapple with him indicates that police security was inadequate. A sudden change of plans led to an informal stroll instead of a car ride. But this does not excuse a lack of attention which could have had tragic personal and international results. It is humiliating for Canada that a Soviet bodyguard was immediately called in to give the visitor closer protection on Canadian soil. It can be assumed that the remainder of Mr. Kosygin's tour of Canada will be so heavily guarded that another similar incident will not be possible.

Canadians in general tend toward the British attitude on Communism: not favorable, but recognizing it as an existing system of government for many millions of people in a number of countries. It is hoped that Mr. Kosygin will realize that this is the tolerant view of most Canadians, and that the demonstrations and threats of violence are largely the product of immigrants to Canada who have brought from their homelands bitter memories of oppression and perhaps personal tragedy.

We can sympathize with their feelings but not with a violent expression of them. In adopting a life in Canada newcomers are presumed to have subscribed to Canadian ideals and customs. By acting otherwise they put themselves at odds with Canada as well as with their former homelands—they ill repay the chance for a new and freer life which this country has given them. In the present instance, Canada has been damaged, not the Soviet Union. Let that be an end of it.

". . . if Mr. Nixon doesn't change his mind, would you ask him to set it off on Hallowe'en night . . .?"

Rumors From the Mysterious North

British Columbians with a memory of the multi-million-dollar Wenner-Gren empire-of-the-north project—one of Premier Bennett's most spectacular fiascos—will be understandably concerned by reports of current activity in the Stikine River area. A recent survey visit and talks involved Health Minister Loffmark, who is a member of Mr. Bennett's inner treasury board, with the United States Ambassador to Canada, Mr. Schmidt, and the U.S. consul in Vancouver. This reinforces reports that something may be under way in this area.

The economic factors are the power potential of the Stikine-Iskut river system and the large timber, copper and other resources known to be present. (The power possibilities of the rivers are believed to be already under survey by the British Newfoundland Corporation.) An interesting sidelight is provided by the suggestion that export port facilities through the Alaskan panhandle might be obtained in return for Canadian hydro power supplied to American communities on the panhandle.

A project of vast importance to British Columbians could be in the making. But the old Bennett passion for secrecy about the public's business, and past incidents in which important policies and large segments of the people's assets were wrapped up and sealed before there was much public knowledge of what was going on — these factors tend to arouse public uneasiness, rather than the confidence they should, when rumors of great deals begin to circulate.

Another aspect, already said to be receiving attention from both federal and provincial fisheries authorities, concerns the effects on fisheries resources of any hydro dam projects on the rivers. Against a background of such important matters concerning British Columbia's present and future, Mr. Loffmark's reluctance to admit much more than that his United States visitors had been in the area with him, and Mr. Bennett's assertion that he had no knowledge of what Mr. Loffmark might have been doing, are hardly informative enough.

Once, we nearly gave away a tenth of the province to Mr. Wenner-Gren for development. We were lucky to get out of that one at a cost of only $8 millions for a copy of the Wenner-Gren survey report which was promptly put in a pigeonhole for permanent oblivion. It is unprogressive to be negative toward proposals for economic development. If only there were not so many denials, evasions, disavowals and "no-comments" within the provincial cabinet it would be easier to believe our interests were being well looked after — and protected.

London in the Sagebrush

It would be hard to imagine a stranger locale for a rebuilt London Bridge than the sandy wastes of southern California and Arizona. Truth being stranger than fiction, however, the bridge's granite blocks have been carefully fitted together at Lake Havasu City. A few days ago, amid the wail of bagpipes and scenes reminiscent of English history, the new bridge was formally opened in the presence of the Lord Mayor of London.

Sold for almost $2.5 millions and reconstituted for another $4 millions, the bridge could prove a remarkable investment for the "instant city" on the shores of Havasu Lake. The promoter hopes that the 140-year-old structure and accompanying attractions will draw 5 million tourists and $50 millions to the city annually.

Even so, Londoners are probably content that they have sold a liability for a substantial price. London Bridge was too narrow for modern traffic, slowly sinking and encrusted with the grime of countless London days and nights.

In noting the debut of another aspiring centre of simulated Old English charm Victorians are watching the birth of a rival. Sagebrush and the six-gun may prove more compatible (financially) with heraldry, pubs and nursery rhyme bridges than we think.

HAROLD GREER

A Sudden Switch in Tactics

TORONTO—It probably won't affect the outcome, but the Conservatives are suddenly desperate and running scared in the final days of Ontario's election campaign.

Premier William Davis has almost completely abandoned his early strategy of being above it all and is now issuing promises, statements and counter-attacks at a frantic one-a-day clip. The object, clearly enough, is to make a greater impact with the voters than was being achieved with his no-promises, no-politics approach.

At the same time, Conservative candidates in several parts of the province have discovered the Party's propaganda, which has concentrated entirely on Mr. Davis' leadership, is a doubtful asset at best and have switched to promoting themselves as the Progressive Conservative rather than the Bill Davis candidate. Even a man as safe as George Kerr, the Minister of the Environment in Halton West, has told his riding to turn the propaganda off.

The cause of the about-face appears to be that the massive Conservative radio and television advertising, costing at least $2,000,000, is not working — or at least not working as well as party strategists expected it to.

The original strategy, laid down last spring after Mr. Davis narrowly won the Conservative leadership, flowed from a poll conducted for the Party by Market Opinion Research Inc. of Detroit, which is widely used by the Republican Party in the U.S. The poll showed that while Ontario voters had heard of Mr. Davis, they didn't know much about him; his "image" was flat, he had no public personality.

Plans for the 'Image'

To overcome this, it was decided that Mr. Davis, before calling the election, should make one or two very dramatic "decisions" as premier; journey into the province on meet-the-people tours at which he would be photographed in as many "human" situations as possible; rush a mammoth program of new legislation through the Legislature in which quantity would be more important than content; then call the election campaign in which he would present himself as the quiet, decisive leader and the party advertising would sell him as the man who is "doing things for people."

This strategy began with Mr. Davis' announcement that the Spadina Expressway project in Toronto, on which some $70-millions had been spent, would not be completed. It proceeded according to plan, and apparently with satisfactory success, up to about two weeks before the Oct. 21 election. Then suddenly it started to disintegrate.

The explanation one hears, sotto voce, is that the advertising missed the mark. It was too puerile, too stupid even when judged against the usual nonsense of commercial radio and TV advertising. The image makers had tried using Mr. Davis directly on camera, only to find he was too dull.

Whereupon Mr. Davis, who had been careful to make all his promises before (in some cases, a few hours before) he called the election, suddenly started promising with the best of them. There would be a stepped-up winter works program to combat unemployment; measures to alleviate the U.S. surcharge on imports from Ontario; a provincial park near Hamilton; cheaper Hydro rates in northern Ontario; rapid transit to replace the Spadina Expressway; more GO commuter transit for Metro Toronto, and others too numerous to mention.

Evidence of Panic

That Mr. Davis has panicked was clearly revealed in his decision to claim that a "cost analysis" done by officials of the Treasury Department showed that it would require $2,339-millions and $2,497-millions respectively to implement the promises made by his Liberal and New Democratic Party opponents. On cross-examination, these figures were revealed to be so phoney that only a desperate man would try to use them.

The "cost analysis" contained no breakdown of what opposition promises had been made or what they would cost.

He also admitted that half of his grand totals involved "transfer" taxes without any net additional burden on the provincial economy. Both opposition parties, for example, propose the abolition of health care premiums and the financing of these programs out of general revenue; both also propose a greater provincial share of education costs with a corresponding reduction in local property taxes. Mr. Davis' "cost analysis" made no provision for these offsets.

There was, of course, no costing of opposition programs which claim to save money — the Liberal proposal, for example, to reduce and consolidate governments so as to eliminate waste and duplication of public services, or the NDP policy of government-run, no-fault auto insurance.

And although civil servants had been told to figure out what opposition policies would cost, there was no mention of what Mr. Davis' promises would cost. In the first place, he did not make promises, he made "commitments" and in the second place, his commitments "really didn't require any great deal of costing," the amount of money being so small. Just, at a rough guess, about $500 millions.

Influencing Vote?

Will it affect the vote on Oct. 21? It should, because it puts Mr. Davis' integrity in issue, though not quite in the way Mr. Davis originally had in mind. But it probably won't. The opposition parties are not disposed to pursue the matter because that would be negative and critical and in Ontario politics, one must be very careful about being negative and critical.

Besides, Mr. Davis has announced that he will be compelled, most reluctantly, to make another statement before the election concerning the government's decision not to extend the tax-supported separate school system: certain "misrepresentations" have been made — not otherwise specified but no doubt by the opposition parties, who favor extension — which simply must be cleared up.

That should remind the voters what this election is really all about. With bigotry to vote on, who cares if the Premier has integrity or not?

60 Years Ago

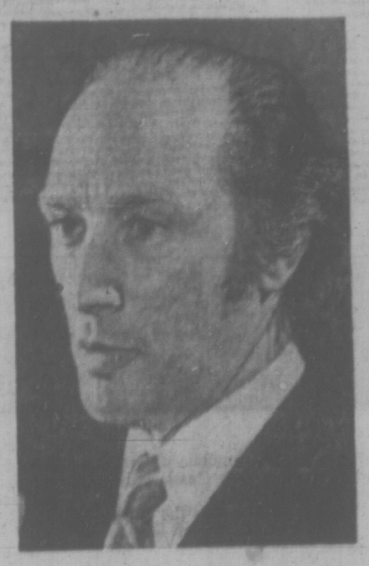
From the Times of Oct. 19, 1911:

VANCOUVER — J. D. Craig, chief of the Canadian boundary survey, Thomas Riggs, Jr., engineer in charge of the American Alaskan boundary survey party, and Mr. Pope, assistant to the latter, have arrived here from the north.

The past few months have been devoted to running a line along the 141st meridian from Mount St. Elias to the Arctic ocean. This line is the boundary between the northern parts of the United States and Canada.

Bread-and-Butter Issues Will Decide the Next Election

BRUCE HUTCHISON



Just one year ago Prime Minister Trudeau was at the dizzy apex of his power. Having dealt boldly with certain events in Quebec, he enjoyed perhaps more public esteem than any of his predecessors had ever known. To the great majority of Canadians (despite the bitter dissent of a minority) he looked like a combination of Macdonald and Laurier, or even of Galahad and Deus ex Machina.

But a year later we are asked, in a new book, to believe that the whole Trudeau legend was spurious from the beginning, that the victory of 1968 was a conjurer's trick, that the man himself is a combination of Mephistopheles and Mickey Mouse.

Somewhere in between these two absurdities lies the truth. It is very hard to come by, but the Canadian people's judgment of it, not long from now, will largely decide the nation's future for some years ahead. The prime minister, in fact, is himself the central issue of our politics, comprehending and often blurring all others.

In his book, "Shrug," Walter Stewart reluctantly predicts that Mr. Trudeau will win the next election almost as easily as he won the last one. This prospect makes the author despair of the voters' intelligence, but he does his best to warn them against their infatuation with a glamorous phoney, a charming fraud.

While I happen to think that Mr. Stewart's electoral prediction is quite wrong and that his hysterial attack on Mr. Trudeau is likely to help more than it injures him, my opinion and the author's don't matter. The only important consideration is what the people think of Mr. Trudeau a year after his greatest triumph and what they will think on election day.

Living on the outer western fringe of the nation, of course I don't know what the people think of him but I cannot doubt, that their thoughts have been radically revised in this past year of anti-climax. Mr. Trudeau, as he doubtless would agree privately, is in the deepest trouble. That wouldn't matter much, either, if we were not all in trouble with him. Unfortunately we are.

In the past year many things have gone wrong, many accepted premises of our national life have been denied, and the government's whole program (along with the tortured strategy of the opposition) has become a shambles. Why, we must ask, in the easy wisdom of hindsight, has all this happened? The reasons are various and complicated — an international monetary crisis, for example — but in Canada a larger question is posed and I believe that it underlies all the others.

Glittering Cliche

When Mr. Trudeau marched to office in 1968, like a young emperor returning to Rome after conquering the barbarians, a glittering cliche marched with him. It was said by many innocent spectators, including this reporter, that the nation's mental climate and life view must have changed basically or it would not have embraced a man of Mr. Trudeau's unlikely character, the image of youth eternal. His triumph did not cause but merely reflected and embodied a fundamental transformation of the Canadian spirit.

Was this really true or only a passing spasm of euphoria and hero worship? Has the nation changed as much as we assumed? Or is the old Canadian Adam, with all his old vices, still among us?

That question sounds too abstract and theoretical for the grimy business of politics but it is not. On the contrary, it is the decisive practical question facing Mr. Trudeau after his year of failure and misery.

To be sure, he will not ask it in public. He will continue to ask different questions, most of them irrelevant, and to utter his whimsical obliquities, most of them concealing his thoughts and confusing his enemies. Yet he must know that his original reach for a Just Society (that fatal catchword) far exceeded his grasp, that the nation was neither prepared for such a sudden leap forward nor able to make it as he had hoped.

He has found, I suspect, that the Canadian breed is not composed of intellectuals, idealists and philosophers like himself but is incurably bourgeois, middle-class and comparatively conservative (in no partisan sense of the word).

Perhaps he never believed otherwise in his heart and was always a skeptical pragmatist, as he claimed, but his policies, such as they were, seemed to be based on the vision of a new, imaginary, idealistic Canada which, in the autumn of 1971, looks more dubious than ever.

For what, after all, are most of the Canadian people thinking about now? They are not thinking about any abstraction or political theory, any of the subtle logic in Mr. Trudeau's books, if they have even read them. No, they are thinking of jobs, prices, wages and mundane affairs touching their own households and purses — not because Canadians are less idealistic than other peoples but because they are less idealistic, radical and Utopian than Mr. Trudeau, or at least his brave promises, assumed.

Personality Not Enough

That is why the economic, bread-and-butter issues now dominate our politics and will decide the next election. That is why Mr. Trudeau's personality alone will not win the election as it won in 1968, and why he must have an understandable policy as well. At this writing he has none — none, that is to say, which begins to grapple with the nation's economic problems or to put enough butter on its bread.

Here we encounter a queer paradox in this most paradoxical man. If he meant anything in 1968 he meant that the state would manage the economy for the public good and, with abundant wealth thus available, would distribute it with a new justice. Yet when the economy fails to perform as expected, what has the trained economist, reformer and daring manager actually done? For all the twists and turns of superficial policy, he has done nothing fundamental, nothing.

As one of his remote admirers I admit complete surprise at his failure to do something when he has the chance and, indeed, the necessity. The need to impose some form of controls on the inflated, crapulous economy seems so obvious that I simply cannot understand the timidity of a man who, only a year ago, acted so courageously in Quebec. And, watching events in Washington, where a president has acted courageously in economic affairs, I am even more surprised and, as a Canadian, humiliated, to find Richard Nixon suddenly looking better than Pierre Trudeau.

Is Mr. Stewart right then? Is there no substance behind the facade, no secret within the smiling sphinx of Ottawa? I doubt it, but the next few weeks should give us the answer. They should also tell us whether Mr. Trudeau is capable of winning his second election or deserves to win it.

THE LIPPMANN VIEW

A World Divided in Two Is Now Divided in Four

The most influential journalist and political thinker of his times, Walter Lippmann has guided more than three generations of Americans through the intricacies of domestic politics and foreign affairs.

At 82, an age when most men muse over the past and write their memoirs, Lippmann remains an acute observer of the current scene, writing occasional articles, travelling and working on a book dealing with the problems of governing in an age of revolution.

Ronald Steel, who is currently writing Lippman's biography, went to Maine last month to interview Lippmann for the Washington Post.

Q: What do you think of President Nixon's overtures to China and his projected visit to Peking?

A: The approach to China which resulted in the invitation is really a great historical event. It's one of the biggest reversals that I know of in history, where the world's most powerful country and the world's largest country completely changed their role vis-a-vis one another.

The consequences of that will take a long time to play out and are unpredictable at this moment. But when you have a world divided into two and you then change it into a world divided into four — China, the Soviet Union, the United States and Japan — it will produce a wholly different result.

The mere going to China, the willingness to accept the invitation, is in itself an acknowledgment of a colossal error that the United States made at the beginning of the cold war. That's when we departed from the old American doctrine that the government we recognized, whether we liked it or not, was the one that governed the country.

That error has had enormous consequences, because having made the decision to treat the People's Republic of China as an enemy, we then made a great number of promises and commitments to carry out that decision — such as the policy with Taiwan, and the various treaties and guarantees we scattered around the western side of the Pacific.

Those commitments were made in good faith and can't be thrown aside lightly, even though we now admit the premise was an error. It will probably take a generation to correct the consequences of having made such a big mistake.

My view is that it is better to have made the mistake and to correct it than to persist in it. It's a mistake that can be corrected by a strong power, without humiliation necessarily, and with a certain amount of good faith.

The willingness to admit the mistake and adjust to it, to make decisions quietly, to reverse the policy slowly, with due consultation and notice to everybody tactfully — that's what diplomacy is all about.

Q: Does it surprise you that such a radical examination of an obsolete policy is being made by Nixon, who has made a career of being an anti-communist?

A: Only Nixon, among the available public men, could have made such a reversal. And he did it in the best tradition of Anglo-American politics. Remember, after all, it was the Tories who enfranchised the masses of people in England in the 19th century, not the Liberals.

The theory when I was young and just learning about politics was that you always got conservatives to do the liberal things, and liberals to do the conservative things. In Nixon's case it's very dramatic because he was such a violent and unscrupulous anti-communist, but nevertheless it's in the correct order of political progress that it's happening.

Japan's Power to Manipulate Has Been Reduced in Asia

Q: How is this going to affect our relations with Japan and Japan's role in Asia?

A: I think it's going to reduce Japan's power to manipulate the situation because there are going to be four in the game instead of two. She'll be only one in a multipolar world and I think that it will be healthy for her, and it will be healthy for us to have admitted our mistakes.

Q: Chou En-lai recently spoke of the dangers Japan represented to China, and this was received with certain sympathy by American observers. It would seem that we may be moving back toward the prewar position of Chinese-American friendship against powerful Japan.

A: I think there's great underlying sentiment for China in the United States. There always has been a good deal of the disappointed lover in our attitude toward China. Americans had been missionaries and had done what they thought was the best thing for China. Then they felt spurned and were outraged. But there has always been a very strong pro-Chinese feeling in the United States.

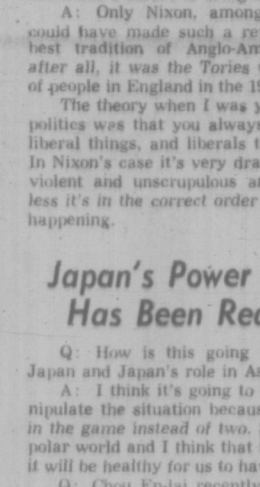
Q: It was interesting that this radical reversal of policy met with almost unanimous public approval, which might indicate that this is another area in which governmental policy had fallen behind public opinion.

A: I think that this is certainly true. The old anti-communist crusading, in which you had to outlaw and blackball anything Chinese, had been dead for some time. The reason there was no outcry about the reversal was that it was made under the auspices of a certified anti-communist like Nixon. There was nothing to object to.

I consider the whole thing a plus and I don't care whether Nixon wanted to be re-elected; I see no reason why Nixon shouldn't want to be re-elected. The fact that he did it was a real service and it's one of the things the administration will be known for.

Q: So what you see is a concert of powers — the United States, Russia, China, Japan, and perhaps a revived Europe — all interacting against one another, and without forming alliances. Is that viable?

A: You see, I consider world government absolutely impossible to attain. I'm not even sure we wouldn't be in rebellion against it if there were one. The next thing you can have is hegemony. Some power can rule the world



CHOU
. . . sentiment in U.S.

ELLSBERG
. . . 'courageous'

for a while. But that can't last very long — less and less as the modern world develops. Or you can have a bipolar world such as we've had for only a few years, or else you get to a multi-polar world. I think that on the whole there is safety in numbers.

Q: For the first time in history no power can destroy its rival without being destroyed in return. Has this stabilized the world power structure?

A: In a book I'm working on I discuss the various forms of doom that are being prophesied. This sense of doom grew up only when the Soviet Union and the United States had atomic bombs. Oppenheimer (atomic physicist J. Robert Oppenheimer) compared the situation to two scorpions in a bottle. As long as you had two powers alone in the world, they might kill each other. But when many people have nuclear bombs — there are now four or five, maybe more — there's a community and nobody can exterminate anybody else without all the others being frightened. That's not an abnormal way of stabilizing a power situation.

Q: There's much concern in the administration and the Congress about the Soviet fleet in the Mediterranean, and the Soviet political presence in the Middle East. Do you think that this really represents a threat to American interests?

A: The idea that the Soviet presence in the Mediterranean and the Middle East is something that can't be tolerated was invented by the British as a way of protecting their road to India. It is a product of empire, and when the empire dissolved, of course the reason for protecting that road dissolved. The United States has no reason for wanting to exclude the Soviets from the Mediterranean.

Now, whether our interests are threatened is a question of how you define our interests. What are our interests? I think our interests are, on the whole, the development of the resources of the Middle East and peace in the Middle East. As for the Arab-Israel conflict, I think that on the whole, the basic theory of the administration is correct.

There should be a balance of power in which Israel cannot be crushed by the Arabs, or by the Soviet Union and the Arabs, but on the other hand is not strong enough to overrun more territory than it already has now, or perhaps to hold even as much. I think it's basically a correct policy, and can be made to work. If the Israelis were sure that we really meant they couldn't be destroyed, they wouldn't be so interested in particular pieces of territory.

The World Is Better Place With Israel in the Mideast

Q: The disaster of Vietnam has made people believe we must define national interest much more narrowly. Do we have a vital interest in the survival of Israel? How would you define U.S. national interest?

A: That word is so encrusted with historical meanings that it's hard to say what you mean by it. The national interest has been identified with every conceivable thing that people are interested in. Once the national interest in Europe was that the Catholic religion should spread. Then it was the Protestant religions. And then it was that the woollen trades should have a good market, and then it was that nations should get gold to inflate their currencies.

National interest can mean any one of these things. But in our time it seems to me that our national interest is to see that we are comfortably secure against invasion and attack within a perfectly naturally defensible area that we recognize. For instance, with an invasion of Canada the vital American national interest would be involved at once; invasion of Mexico, the seizure of Cuba, would mean that.

On the other hand, we can't say that Israel is as vital as that to the United States. It does no good to pretend that it is. But the world is a better place for having Israel in the Middle East; it is advancing civilization and technology there, and the world would be a worse place if it didn't exist. We ought to use our power, not to fight a war there, but to discourage and offset power, to feed Israel Phantom jets, and so on.

Q. Is Western Europe an area vital to U.S. interests?

A: Yes. I consider Western Europe up to somewhere in the middle of Germany as vital. And the division of Germany, while lamentable really, is not fatally awful. There is no doubt that somewhere in Germany there is an abyss where our vital interest fades off.

Q. Do you think it should be an aim of American policy to seek a unification of Germany and the withdrawal of foreign troops?

A: Yes. I think we should accept it as a matter of fact that if the Germans wish to unite we should not prevent them. There I think we would come into conflict with the Russians, who want to keep them divided, and perhaps to a certain degree with the French. But I think that when the Germans want to unite they will unite and they shouldn't be prevented by force.

Q: What do you think of Nixon's Vietnam policy and where is it likely to take us?

A: President Nixon came into office with three dominating ideas in his mind. One was the notion that he wouldn't let anybody charge him with having lost the war, he wouldn't be the first president to lose a war. The second point, which he got from the thinking in the Pentagon, in the industrial and military complex, was that we needed to hold on to Camranh Bay as the strong point in Southeast Asia. The third was that he had to end the war in his first term if he wanted to be re-elected.

Now, in order to satisfy these three criteria, he adopted a very contorted, acrobatic policy. The simple, direct policy would have been to say the war has been a mistake, it was done by the people who have just been defeated in the election, and I'm going to end the war and negotiate a withdrawal, fixing a date with North Vietnam. This would have been a perfectly feasible thing to do, and one which he was advised to do.

The French foreign office, which acted as sort of intermediary, told him the conditions under which he could end the war. But because he didn't want to give up any of his three points which he wanted to touch, he invented the absurd policy of saying he would withdraw the troops, but nevertheless, South Vietnam would win the war. This was really absurd, considering that we didn't win it when we had our troops.

In order to cover the failure and absurdity of that policy, he made the dashes into Cambodia and into Laos, which made certain enthusiasts for his policy shriek that they were winning, when there was no chance of winning.

In fact, the whole policy was so absurd and getting so dangerous that it had to be rescued, to use the language he likes, by a great "forward pass." That was the China policy. That rescued him from the disaster and the collapse of his attempts to do things in Vietnam which couldn't be done by withdrawing.

I am for the China policy, and I think it will work, because I think now he has to withdraw from Vietnam. I believe he will now fix a date, which is all he ever had to do to get out of Vietnam, and get out quite honorably and decently.

Not honorably and decently considering what the war has been, but honorably and decently in the sense that the Vietnamese army isn't going to march up Broadway and the Vietnamese flag is not going to fly over the Capitol. Nothing like that is going to happen. It's a perfectly decent loss, but not defeat. We'll have not been defeated but we'll have failed at an enterprise in which it was never possible to succeed.

Q: What was your reaction to the revelations of the Pentagon Papers?

A: They were a great surprise to me. I didn't know they existed, and then, as soon as I knew enough about what they contained and how they were obtained, I felt at once that publication was a thing that had to be done.

LIPPMANN
. . . acute observer

It rather resembled the Boston Tea Party. When you have a grievance and the grievance is to know how you got into one of the most costly wars in your history, and the government won't tell you, and has over-classified and hidden things — then, you have to do something to force information out into the open.

In the Boston Tea Party the colonists couldn't get redress from the king, and so they poured his tea in the water. They didn't kill anybody, and they didn't pretend they weren't doing what they did.

This man Ellsberg, whom I don't know but who seems to be a courageous man, said he'd take the blame for it, and that I think is what a conscientous man does, must do, if he must break the law. He didn't run away, he didn't try to hide, he didn't equivocate and the newspapers didn't either. I think the affair was well handled by the press and I think they made their point.

Q: Do you think that the press has a right to publish whatever secret documents it may obtain if it feels it's in the national interest?

A: Less and less as life goes on, because I have come to believe there are no absolute rights. The American Constitution is unworkable if anybody claims an absolute right to do anything. Everything good in the constitution depends upon self-restraint and an agreement to let the other person live. The press has no right to publish everything. Obviously not. It may be libellous, treasonable, anything. On the other hand, nobody has the absolute right to classify. The two rights can only be adjusted to each other by reasonable men and if you don't have reasonable men, our system can't work.

Q: Is this a case where there were such overriding issues that other considerations had to be set aside?

A: I'm very much impressed that four volumes of the papers were never given out and never published. They dealt with negotiations in progress. Now that's very discriminating. What was done in military action five years ago is not a current thing and anybody who knows anything about codes knows there's no code-breaking involved there.

Q: What did you feel the papers indicated about the tendency of government to be carried on in secret?

A: After the Second World War we found ourselves enormously powerful. The papers show the intoxication the U.S. suffered from its suddenly acquired power. We were really nouveau riche. We had power and we were egged on to use that power by Churchill and others beyond anything we were trained for, ever expected to have. The Pentagon Papers reveal a lot of intoxicated people playing for the first time in their lives with real power. I think it's a sorry reflection on their ability.

'Safety in numbers because world gov't impossible to attain'

Q: How can we exert public control over this kind of secret government?

A: This event itself is a control. The experience of the war and the dreadful consequences of the war and the Pentagon Papers and what they reveal about the concealment are themselves a kind of vaccination.

Q: How do you feel about the role of the military in our foreign policy? Do you believe in the military-industrial complex?

A: There is such a thing. I tell you, we are in an unhappy time which all countries go through in the second generation after a world war. They usually have very poor generals and military personnel. The French suffered from the Maginot Line and all that, and after the Second World War we've suffered from really rather second-rate generals and second-rate admirals. The commanders in the Vietnam war have been far inferior to the ones who fought and won the Second World War.

Q: You've argued eloquently, and a number of people have echoed your feelings, that the United States should take a benign attitude toward revolutions in most countries and let them work out their own problems as they will, even if it means confiscation of American firms, and that this will be one way of avoiding future Vietnams. But given the role of American business in many underdeveloped countries, and the role of business in the American government, do you think it's possible for the United States, given its economic system, to follow a policy of indifference toward revolutions and nationalization, in places like South America?

A: I don't think indifference is quite the right word, but it certainly can follow a policy of not putting the whole military establishment at the service of businesses that are aggrieved, or oppressed, or expropriated, or whatnot. The world is so complicated and so big and so interrelated that things have to be let to find their own level because you can't arrange it. Nobody is wise enough or clever enough or strong enough to arrange it all for the world. That was one of the illusions of the postwar world.

'Withdrawal Is a Very Sensible Thing to Do'

Q: But do you feel then that economics plays an important role, that the United States is required by its economic system to oppose revolutions in underdeveloped countries?

A: I don't agree with that, no. The United States is so big and so rich that no particular event in some small weak country is of vital importance to it. Inconvenient yes, but not vitally important.

Q: On numerous occasions the president has warned about the rise of neo-isolationism in the U.S. What does that mean and how do you feel about it?

A: Well, neo-isolationism is the direct product of foolish globalism. If you think you can run the world and then you find out you can't, you withdraw to what you can run, and they call that neo-isolationist. Well, withdrawal is a very sensible thing to do.

Q: So you wouldn't flinch from that term?

A: Compared to people who thought they could run the universe, or at least the globe, I am a neo-isolationist and proud of it.

Q: Do you think there's any danger that the United States could withdraw too much from the world?

A: Yes, certainly, you can overdo everything and because we're not absolutely wise, omniscient, we probably will. But I think as soon as something vital is touched, like Canada, the isolationism will disappear at once.

MR. FERRARI DRIVES A FIAT 128.

The Mr. Ferrari we refer to is the very same Mr. Ferrari who makes some of the fastest and most expensive cars in the world.

And for his own personal use, he does drive a Fiat 128.

It's not that he feels the Fiat is any better than a Ferrari.

He just feels that the car we make is a more sensible car to drive around town in than the car he makes.

However, it is rather enlightening that out of all the small sensible cars sold in Europe—some fifty in all—he chose a Fiat.

Enlightening, but not astonishing, when you consider that in Europe, where they've been buying small cars for three generations, they buy more Fiats than anything else. Volkswagens included.

Now, if you're thinking about buying your first small car, you might keep all this in mind.

After all, when it comes to cars, you can't fool a Ferrari.

Millionaire Elected Radical Leader

PARIS (WP) — Millionaire magazine publisher Jean-Jacques Servan-Schreiber was elected president of the Radical Party Sunday at a stormy congress which may have helped revitalize France's oldest political formation — or hasten its often rumored demise.

The 431 to 267 vote victory over former minister and outgoing party president Maurice Faure marked Servan-Schreiber's effective takeover of the moribund party, which he rejoined actively only two years ago as secretary-general.

The congress pitted the publisher's younger, dynamic and relatively inexperienced militants against the aging wheelhorses of a party which in the Fifth Republic has never recovered the vital role it enjoyed under the previous two French republics.

Servan-Schreiber hopes to force an alliance between the Radicals and the centre parties to its right, Faure — and the party's parliamentarians — believe the party should continue to seek salvation solely to the left.

Such calculations are based on the knowledge that the Radicals relied on Communist votes to salvage most of their present parliamentary strength — 14 of 497 seats in the national assembly and 33 of 283 senate seats.

$12.12 Tax Saving

OTTAWA (CP) — Last week's federal tax cut means a $12.12 tax saving this year for single taxpayers earning $6,000 a year.

For a married man earning $10,000 a year, with no children and no taxable income earned by his wife, the reduction is $23.16. For a married man with two children and an annual income of $12,000 a year, the cut is $29.40.

These figures were confirmed for The Canadian Press Monday by the finance department in the absence of new tax rate tables. The department said it does not intend at this stage to release sample tax levies by income classes as it usually does when a major change is made in tax rates.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson last Thursday announced a three-per-cent federal tax reduction. It applies from last July 1 to the so-called basic tax computed on personal incomes in accordance with existing graduated tax scales. It extends to Dec. 31, 1972. New tax tables will be issued for 1972.

A single taxpayer with no dependents and an income of $6,000 a year can claim standard exemptions of $1,100 and pay tax on $4,900. The basic tax on that amount of taxable income is $808.

CUTS AFFECTS BASIC

The tax cut of $12.12 this year is three per cent of the $808 basic tax for half the year 1971.

However, this basic tax calculation does not take into account other taxes that must be paid. These are the four-per-cent old-age security tax up to a maximum of $240 a year and the two-per-cent social development tax up to a maximum of $120 a year.

A three-per-cent surtax on basic income tax in excess of $200 was lifted in Finance Minister Benson's June 18 budget, effective last July 1. To accomplish this mid-year tax cut, the surtax is simply levied at a rate of 1.5 per cent for the whole year.

The single $6,000-a-year taxpayer will therefore pay $1,066.88 in taxes for 1971, in provinces which levy no more provincial income tax than a standard 28-per-cent abatement allowed by Ottawa. Only Nova Scotia, Ontario and British Columbia now apply a 28-per-cent provincial tax. All other provinces charge higher rates, up to 38 per cent in New Brunswick and 39 per cent in Manitoba.

ONTARIO WILL ACT

Premier William Davis of Ontario, campaigning for Thursday's provincial election, said last week he will cut the provincial tax take by three per cent if the mechanics can be worked out under federal-provincial tax collection arrangements.

Ottawa's tax cut for the last half of 1971 is an across-the board slice off the basic tax. At the lowest end of the taxable income scale, it means a saving of 48 cents for the single person with no dependents and an income of $1,800 a year.

In the $20,000-a-year income class, it means a tax saving of $87.37 for the single taxpayer with no dependents, $80.62 for the married taxpayer with no children and $76.57 for the married taxpayer with two dependents.

For the $50,000-a-year single person who now pays a basic tax of $20,965, the saving will be $314.47. If married, he now pays $20,415 and will save $306.22 from that, if he has no dependent children.

He will save $304.27 on his regular tax bill of $20,085 if he is married and supporting two children.

B.C. Policy J-O-B-S

Premier Bennett gave no hint Monday that he is prepared to follow Ontario premier William Davis' move to cut personal income taxes to match the federal reduction of three per cent.

Bennett would not say anything about Ontario's decision. He said British Columbia is creating jobs with highways, parks, school, hospital and forestry projects.

"Our great problem is to create jobs, and then we have this great plan to get the hard core unemployed back in the working force so people who have been on social assistance three months or longer . . . our whole policy is as I announced in the last budget — the four letter Social Credit word is J-O-B-S," Bennett said.

Interest Rates Firm

Supply of government guaranteed mortgage funds for contractors was short in Victoria as in most of Canada during September, reports the Mortgage Insurance Co. of Canada.

The month generally brought little change in the conventional and National Housing Act mortgage field as interest rates firmed and demand for funds stayed.

Victoria and 14 other centres east to Halifax had fewer finished but unsold houses available, indicating some narrowing of supply and demand.

DEMAND STEADY

Interest rates in the conventional area ranged commonly from 9½ per cent to 9¾ per cent, with the NHA range between 9 per cent and 9¾ per cent.

In the commercial and industrial sector the demand for mortgage funds was steady in Victoria, but like Edmonton, Sudbury, Thunder Bay, Quebec City and Montreal, funds were scarce.

Rates ranged between 9¾ per cent and 10½ per cent.

Individual mortgages were in adequate to plentiful supply locally, as were funds for rental projects. Generally, the supply of funds was slightly better in early October.

Demand for funds last month was slow to steady in all categories, and the real estate market was described by the surveying firm as slow in Victoria.

BUSINESS AND FINANCE

Pitfield

Offices occupied for 41 years on Montreal's famous financial street were abandoned last week by Pitfield, MacKay, Ross and Co. Ltd.

The national investment house moved from its former headquarters at 235 St. James Street West to the 31st floor of CIL House, the big, black monolith across from Place Ville Marie on Dorchester Street.

Pitfield MacKay moved its executive offices and headquarters operations previously from Montreal to Toronto.

Grouse

Results of its first quarter to Aug. 31 show substantial revenue improvement by Grouse Mountain Resorts Ltd., of Vancouver, which reports heavier traffic on its chairlift-gondola systems and the benefits of operating its own concessions.

Gross income rose from $675,400 to $1 million, with net income of $162,422 compared with $170,729 a year ago. The current figure includes a tax reduction from losses carried forward from 1970.

Burrard

Shareholders will be asked at the annual meeting Oct. 26 of Burrard Mortgage Investments Ltd., in Vancouver, to approve an expansion of share capital.

The company proposes to increase the authorization from 900,000 to 1.75 million shares, with the same maximum value of $5.33 1-3.

It is intended to seek further approval, permitting the company to expand its operations by the acquisition of additional businesses.

Premier

A Toronto investment house predicts the initial offering of common shares by Premier Cablevision Ltd. will be made this week, giving riset o further speculation on its price compared with cablevision shares already traded in public.

Premier will consist of the former CBS holdings in Canada and Europe — about two dozen companies including Victoria Cablevision Ltd. — which are re-organized to comply with Canadian ownership rules of broadcast media.

It is suggested the offering will be priced around 17 times consolidated earnings.

Versatile

Cutting costs by 30 per cent and tripling income from interst and other sources helped Versatile Manufacturing Ltd., of Winnipeg, reverse a nine-month loss shown a year ago.

The company said net sales were lower, at $17.8 million compared with $21.44 million, but net income was $1 million (38 cents a share) vs. the $545,400 loss (19 cents) in the period last year.

PWA

Ontario Securities Commission has received a prospectus from Pacific Western Airlines on its proposed offering of 120,000 cumulative, convertible, redeemable, preferred series A shares to bear 7½ per cent interest.

To be priced following acceptance by the regulating authorities, the shares will be worth a total $3.4 to $3.6 million to PWA and will be distributed by a group headed by Pemberton Securities, Pitfield, MacKay, Ross and Co. Ltd., and Dominion Securities.

It is proposed that 3 per cent of the issue be redeemed beginning in the fourth year, and subsequent years, and that there be no call for financial gain for five years.

The issue will be used to repay bank loans and to provide working capital.

#GCOS

Great Canadian Oil Sands Ltd. reports its facility at Fort McMuarry, Alta., has resumed production after being closed for about three weeks for planned maintenance and repairs.

The plant processes material from the Alberta oil sands.

Regular crews were kept on the payroll during the period to help repair crews.

Alta. Southern

Alberta and Southern Gas Co. Ltd. has agreed to advance Inexco Oil Co. (Canada) Ltd. $5 million for petroleum exploration and development in the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

In exchange, Inexco would commit any of the gas discovered in those areas to Alberta and Southern, a subsidiary of Pacific Gas and Electric Company of San Francisco.

Exploratory drilling on the five million acres in which Inexco has an interest is to start this winter. The total program could entail up to $25 million over five years.

Trade Problems Temporary: Pepin

MONTEBELLO, Que. (CP) — Trade and industry must become more diversified to make the economy less vulnerable, Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin said Monday.

In a speech to the Canadian Export Association, the trade minister said the present Canada-U.S. trade difficulties are not permanent; they are caused mostly by a "temporary conflict between multilateral and bilateral U.S. interests."

He said the present restrictive economic measures by the U.S. would not be conceived as anything but "counter-productive" if they continued for any length of time.

Pepin said Canada shares many of the feelings that led the U.S. to undertake its present tight economic position.

Canada, too, wanted a realignment of exchange rates that realistically reflects the industrial strength and competitive position of industrial powers.

As well, Canada had a "vital interest" in obtaining a relaxation of restrictions by some countries to reflect fairer balance of trading advantages.

Canada, like the U.S., also saw a need to end the "mercantilist agricultural policies" that restrict trade. A new system of international co-operation in agricultural trade was needed.

But, Pepin said, the U.S. economic measures, far from contributing toward the solution of international trade and payments problems, may produce counter restrictive moves by other countries.

How well will your portfolio perform in 1972?

No investor should take it for granted that a stock he bought several years ago is right for today. And today a wise investor looks twice at some of the stocks he bought as recently as this summer.

Why?

A lot has happened since the tulips last bloomed in Ottawa.

For example, on June 18th Finance Minister Benson brought down his new budget and proposed tax legislation. On August 15th President Nixon announced a 90-day wage and price freeze throughout the United States, a 10% surcharge on imports, and special measures encouraging American companies to buy American.

Between them, Mr. Benson and President Nixon have set a lot of Canadian investors to wondering just how well their current portfolios are going to perform now and in the future.

Close Vote Seen On China Issue

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The General Assembly has set out in an unusually business-like manner to determine who and how many should represent the Chinese people here.

For the next week delegates in the 131-country assembly will debate whether it is possible to invite the People's Republic of China to take a seat here and whether Taiwan should be expelled.

Voting on the whole issue is expected to come early next week with nobody yet certain whether the Albanians will finally be successful in expelling the Nationalists of Taiwan and seating the People's Republic, culminating a 22-year fight that followed the successful takeover of mainland China by the Communists.

The debate opened Monday with Canada and the United States showing themselves poles apart in their thinking.

There were 13 speakers, starting with Albania. Eight, including Canada, supported the Albanian one-China resolution.

BACK U.S. PLAN

The U.S. and two others supported the American proposals to seat the People's Republic in the assembly and the Security Council and retain a seat for Taiwan in the assembly.

Foreign Minister Nesti Nase of Albania lashed out at both the Soviet Union and the United States, saying that both want to keep Peking out of the UN and that the U.S. proposals are designed to exclude the People's Republic.

But that 45-minute speech was the exception rather than the rule.

U.S. Ambassador George Bush emphasized the U.S. proposal is for "dual representation" and is not properly called a two-China policy.

The U.S. seeks to have the assembly declare that the Albanian resolution is an important question, requiring a two-thirds majority for passage. It feels that the Albanian resolution will thus be defeated and the assembly can go on to an American resolution calling for the seating of Taiwan and the People's Republic.

TAKES OPPOSITE VIEW

Canadian Ambassador Yvon Beaulne took a flatly opposite view to the Americans.

He said the only question before the assembly is who shall occupy the single China seat.

"If we keep this essential purpose clearly in focus and do not permit it to become confused with questions of procedural or secondary concern we can accomplish what so obviously needs to be achieved."

He said that Canada hopes the Albanian resolution will receive the overwhelming support of the assembly. The American dual-representation proposal raises "grave political and legal difficulties," Beaulne warned.

"It has been firmly stated by the People's Republic of China that it will not take its seat in this organization if there is any possibilty that others who claim to speak for China may continue to some way to be represented here.

"Moreover, any such proposal is of very doubtful validity in the light of the provisions of the charter.

"The issue is not a question of membership or of expulsion of a member, it is the question of who represents China.

"My government considers that we cannot further delay a decision that it is the People's Republic of China who speaks for China in the UN."

CHANGES MIND

Canada had supported the important question resolution in the past but now believes that the application of this provision "no longer serves the interests of the world community."

Beaulne made Canada's position abundantly clear. Despite a fortright speech in the assembly by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp in September and despite clear-cut statements from Ottawa for the last few months, there still were delegates here who said they were not clear on Canada's position.

This presumably is because Canada declines to speak in public on this question against the United States by name.

Even Beaulne's speech was carefully worded so as to give the least offence to the Americans, while rejecting their views.

Meanwhile Saudi Arabia, which always has supported the Nationalist Chinese, introduced an amendment to the Albanian resolution that would strike out all reference to the expulsion of the Nationalists.

With this amendment the assembly presumably faces this succession of votes:

—A vote whether to accept a U.S. bid for priority for their important question resolution;

—If this goes in favor of the Americans, a vote on the important question resolution;

—A vote on the Saudi Arabian amendment;

—If this fails a vote on the original Albanian one-China resolution;

—If this fails a vote on the American dual representation resolution.

U.S. BOMBS WRONG TROOPS

SAIGON (AP) — A U.S. fighter-bomber accidentally bombed a South Vietnamese position near the Cambodian border and killed 18 South Vietnamese troops, the U.S. command announced today.

The command said seven South Vietnamese paratroops were seriously wounded, and "additional soldiers received lesser wounds" in the bombing raid Monday 60 miles northwest of Saigon.

The command said a U.S. Air Force A-37 jet, flying in support of South Vietnamese troops, dropped two 500-pound bombs on an "assigned target" near the government paratroop base at Thien Ngon, on Route 22 in Tay Ninh province.

A U.S. spokesman said a preliminary investigation indicated the target had been marked by an American forward air controller and cleared by the South Vietnamese ground commander in the area.

It was the worst bombing mistake since March 5, when a napalm strike by U.S. aircraft killed 36 South Vietnamese troops participating in the invasion of Laos.

Torture Probe Pressed

LONDON (Reuter) — Bernadette Devlin and Frank McManus, two Irish members of the British Parliament, picketed Prime Minister Edward Heath's official residence throughout the night to demand an immediate official inquiry into allegations of torture in Northern Ireland.

They moved their protest to 10 Downing Street after earlier failing in the House of Commons to win parliamentary approval for an emergency debate on the charges. Despite mounting concern from the press, Irish MPs, and Britain's opposition Labor party leadership, the government has remained silent since the allegations were first made two days ago.

They came in a report in The Sunday Times that said civilians interned in Ulster under the emergency anti-terrorism measures were being mentally tortured for information. The newspaper alleged that the brainwashing techniques had been refined by the British Army from Russian methods of interrogation.

Heath held a private meeting with Labor Leader Harold Wilson Monday night to discuss the charges. No details of the meeting were given but sources said Wilson and his Irish spokesman, James Callaghan, were told that a tribunal already existing in Belfast to consider appeals against internment had full powers to investigate all complaints.

ALLEGE TORTURE

As the meeting took place, Northern Irish MPs John Hume and Austin Currie circulated among British politicians a bulky dossier alleging further examples of mental torture since internment was introduced in Northern Ireland last August.

A demand for an official investigation into the charges was also made today by the mass circulation Daily Mirror. The newspaper wanted to know "when is somebody going to explain to the British nation, in public, just what the hell is going on."

In another development, Scotland Yard revealed it was even searching coffins at British airports in an attempt to stop the supply of illegal arms to Northern Ireland.

"Reputable undertakers do not arouse suspicion but any others are reported to airport police."

'Can't Shake Hands With Clenched Fist'

NEW DELHI (AP) — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi said today India would do "everything possible" to avoid war with Pakistan but indicated India will not pull back its troops from the border until the crisis in East Pakistan is settled.

Mrs. Gandhi also ruled out any immediate talks with President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan of Pakistan. "You can't shake hands with a clenched fist," she said.

"All along the border, troops have been brought closer to us from the other side," she told her first news conference in 10 months.

Pakistani and foreign military sources say Pakistan has massed about 250,000 troops — the bulk of the army in West Pakistan — along the 750-mile border from Kashmir in the north to the Rajasthan desert in the south.

"There are Pakistani troops all along the line," Mrs. Gandhi said. "There is their hate India campaign. There is their call for war of jihad (holy war) on the basis of religion. All these things have to be considered. You just can't ignore them and say we will withdraw."

The commander of the Pakistan Air Force threatened to take "appropriate action" if Indians "continue to violate Pakistan's air space."

An air force spokesman said Air Marshal A. Rahim Khan made the statement in a message to the head of the Indian Air Force.

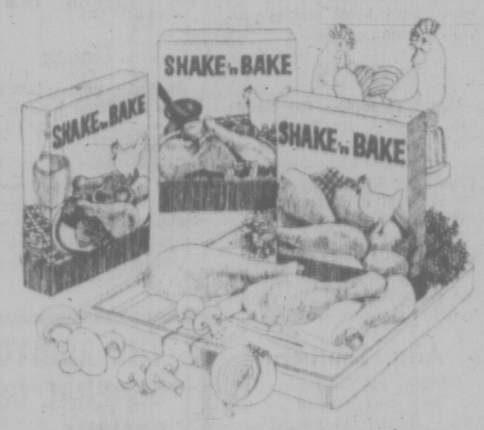
Cook this ad.

We'd like to show you that Shake 'n Bake for chicken gives you more than a tender juicy chicken leg.



For years we've been telling you, Shake 'n Bake for chicken will make chicken pieces turn out juicy and tender, because they bake in their very own juices.

This was good, but along the way we added 2 more chicken flavours, Roast and Italian.

The Roast flavour has a special blend of seasonings to give a real stuffed roast chicken flavour.

On the other hand, the Italian flavour has a combination of herbs and seasonings and even Parmesan cheese. That'sa taste good.

The result, the Shake 'n Bake family of chickens.

But where do we go from here?

Full meals. Beautiful meals that take advantage of Shake 'n Bake and its 3 distinctive chicken flavours.

So, the next time you think of Shake 'n Bake don't just think of chicken legs, think of some of the meals on this page.

After all, it's not everyday you get a chance to cook an ad.

Pilot's Desperate Plea Ignored by FBI Agents

★ ★ ★ ★ ★ ★

And as He Lay Dead Someone in Tower Cracked: 'You Can't Win 'Em All'

WASHINGTON (WP) — When Brent Downs taxied his plane to a stop at Jacksonville International Airport this month, he wondered, nervously, where the fuel truck was.

Downs, a 29-year-old pilot from Nashville, Tenn., had every reason to be nervous. His twin-engine Aero Commander had been commandeered in Nashville at gunpoint by a beefy hijacker who was kidnapping his estranged wife.

Ordered to take them to The Bahamas, Downs was in no mood to argue. But he needed more fuel. He radioed his needs to Jacksonville: fuel, charts, flotation gear, and two bottles of Chivas

Agents Waiting In Darkness

Regal. He was assured that he could refuel without interference, that, except perhaps for the Scotch, "everything will be ready as specified."

Instead, the unsuspecting pilot was directed to a parking pad where FBI agents were waiting in the predawn darkness. Abruptly, Downs found another FBI man barking instructions to him from the airport control tower, instructions that he protested were "endangering lives."

The FBI, it was learned Sunday, heard and repeatedly ignored the captive pilot's desperate pleas.

Within minutes, Brent Downs was dead, shot in the back and buttocks by the hijacker after FBI agents began pumping bullets into the parked plane's wheels and one of its engines.

The hijacker, a 300-pound Nashville real estate man named George Giffe Jr., then turned his 45-calibre automatic on his 25-year-old estraged young wife and finally on himself. All three were dead or dying when the G-men clambered aboard.

The only survivors had left the plane earlier: the co-pilot, Randall Crump, and a friend of Giffe's, Bobby Wayne Wallace, who has been accused of air piracy and kidnapping for helping Giffe.

Shortly after the shootings, sources say, someone in the control tower cracked: "You can't win 'em all."

The FBI's refusal to stay away from the plane and let Downs refuel, despite his stammered protests, is contained in a hitherto secret transcript of the last radio transmissions between the pilot and authorities. A copy has been obtained by the Washington Post.

The tragedy began early in the morning of Oct. 4 when the 35-year-old Giffe arranged to meet his wife, reportedly on the pretext of saying goodbye before he left the country.

According to Nashville police, the couple had broken up a week earlier after a troubled three-year marriage. Mrs. Giffe, police reported, was forced kicking and screaming into the back seat of a car that her husband drove to the Nashville airport.

The police said Giffe had left behind five suicide notes

Hijacker Says He Was A Sorcerer

in the car. In one of them, addressed to his father, he said that he had been "ordered to kill."

Giffe, who has been quoted by friends as saying he was a sorcerer, leased the plane from Big Brothers Aircraft with the story that he was a doctor and that his wife needed treatment in Miami. But Mrs. Giffe began screaming that she was being kidnapped and Larry Reed, an employee of Big Brothers, asked Giffe for his credentials. At that, Reed has said, both Giffe and Wallace drew their pistols and ordered Downs to take off, just before 2 a.m.

The FBI was notified after the plane left Nashville and dispatched agents to the Jacksonville airport when the pilot radioed that he was landing for fuel and other items.

FBI agents have already been publicly excoriated by relatives and associates of the victims. The transcript, based on tape records from the files of the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration suggest that their complaints are based on more than emotion.

According to the transcript, Downs was assured several times — first by Jacksonville air traffic control which is located about 30 miles north of the airport and then by the regular control tower operator at the field itself — that a fuel truck would be standing by when he taxied his plane, code-named "58 November," to its assigned spot. The transcript includes these exchanges, beginning seconds after the privately-owned turboprop touched down.

Pilot (Downs): "Is the fuel truck here?"

Tower: "You say is it a fuel truck?"

Pilot: "I say is the fuel truck here?"

Tower: "Affirmative. Taxi straight ahead to the end, Commander 58 November, all the way to the end . . . okay. That's fine. Right there. Park right where you're at."

Pilot: "(This is) 58 November. They are going to keep this area clear. Is that correct?"

Tower: "That's affirmative."

Pilot: "All right. (pause What's the car sitting back off to our right."

Tower: "It's just an airport vehicle as far as I know, sir."

Evidently unsettled, Downs asked that it be moved away. At this point, another voice, that of an FBI agent, took over the control tower microphone.

Tower: "58 November . . . 58 November. This is the FBI speaking. Cut your engine."

Pilot: ". . . This is the captain speaking. We're going to cut the engines and we're gonna need some fuel, but I request that everyone stay away."

Stay Away From Plane, Pleads Pilot

Tower: "58 November. Advise when your engines have been cut. 58 November?"

Pilot: "This is 58 November. Uh, this gentleman has about 12.5 pounds of plastic explosives back here and (pause) uh, I got no (pause), uh, yen to join it right now so I would please expr, uh, appreciate it if you would stay away from this airplane."

Tower: "That's a Roger, 58 November. Are your engines cut?"

Pilot: "Negative."

Tower: "Stand by."

Pilot: "Where's the fuel truck? . ."

Tower: "This is the FBI. There will be no fuel. Repeat. There will be no fuel. There will be no starter (which Downs had also requested to get the plane airborne again). Have you cut your engines?"

(Pause)

Pilot: "uh (gasp), look, I don't think this fellow's kiddin' — I wish you'd get the fuel truck out here."

Tower: "58 November. There will be no fuel. I repeat. There will be no fuel."

Pilot: "This is 58 November. You are endangering lives by doing this, and uh, we have no other choice but to go along and uh, uh, for the sake of some lives we request some fuel out here, please."

(Pause)

Tower: "58 November. What is the status of your passengers?"

Pilot: "Ah, uh, well, they're okay, if that's what you mean."

Tower: "Are they monitoring this conversation?"

Pilot: "Yes, they are."

Tower: "Do you have two

'I Don't Think Guy Is Kidding'

(Pause)

Tower: "58 November. What's your present fuel status on that aircraft?"

Pilot: "We're down to about 30 minutes."

Tower: "58 November. The decision will be no fuel for that aircraft. No starter. Run it out, any way you want. Passengers, if you are listening — the only alternative in this aircraft is to depart the aircraft, to depart the aircraft."

Here, there was a long pause, apparently for some hurried discussions among those aboard the airplane. urged the two fliers to try to take off without refueling, but, Crump has said, they were afraid to try it in the darkness after looking down the taxiway and spotting a clump of trees that seemed closer than they actually were. Now, it was decided, Crump would get off the plane and try to talk authorities into letting them refuel.

Pilot Downs cut one of the engines so the prop wouldn't interfere with Crump's departure. The co-pilot hopped out only to be met, he reportedly said, by armed FBI agents who hustled him into a waiting car perhaps 35 yards away. They do not appear to have been interested in discussing what he wanted to tell

Kosygin, Ceylon Talks Likely

COLOMBO (AP) — The Ceylonese press speculated today about the possibility of a meeting between Ceylon Premier Sirmavo Bandaranaike and Soviet Premier Kosygin in Canada.

Mrs. Bandaranaike, who is in the United States, where she addressed the United Nations General Assembly, begins a three-day state visit to Canada Thursday.

Kosygin arrived in Ottawa Sunday on an eight-day official visit.

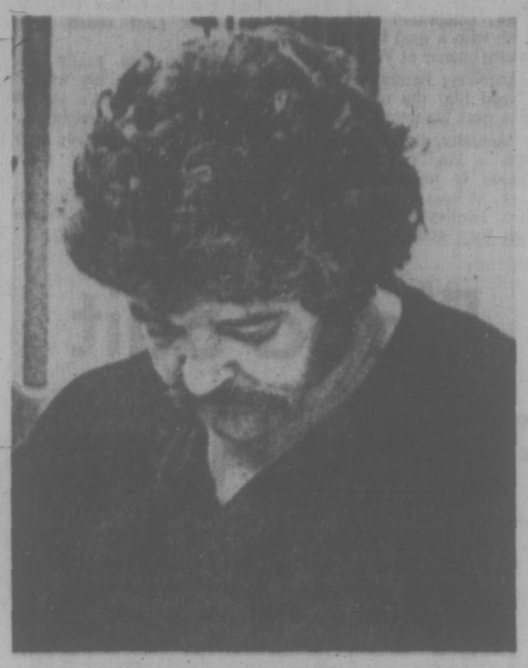
Diplomatic circles here expect a meeting between the two leaders to take place in Canada.

Diplomatic observers believe that the meeting is fortuitious in view of Ceylon's avowed policy on non-alignment. There is speculation that Mrs. Bandaranaike might use such meeting, if it does take place, to seek Soviet support for her Indian Ocean peace zone proposal.

Mrs. Bandaranaike's visit to the U.S. and Canada was fixed at short notice.

Buses Popular

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Shoppers are riding around the downtown section in 19 new minibuses, powered by natural gas-burning engines to reduce pollution. The 20-passenger buses are intended to cut down on use of cars on downtown streets and ease traffic congestion. About 3,000 persons rode them the first day Monday and officials said most were enthusiastic about the new service.



ARRESTED and held on kidnapping and hijacking charges after the FBI "successfully" halted a hijacking attempt in Jacksonville, Fla., earlier this month is Bobby Wayne Wallace, one of two to survive the ordeal.

them, Crump has been quoted as saying.

The transcript reflects only bits and pieces of all this although the FBI agent in the control tower, named by sources as Frank Burns, was in separate radio contact with agents on the field, led by FBI agent James O'Connor.

Tower: "58 November?"

Pilot: "Yeah."

Tower: "Did someone deplane from your aircraft?"

Pilot: "That's affirmative.

Co-Pilot Tried to Talk With Agents

The co-pilot."

(Pause)

Tower: "58 November?"

Pilot: (Muffled reply)

Tower: "The co-pilot is in the car and will not return to the aircraft. He will not return to the aircraft."

A minute or so later, Wallace jumped out, perhaps after having persuaded Giffe that he could succeed where Crump had failed. A pistol reportedly in his belt, Wallace, 32, began moving toward the back of the plane when an FBI agent yelled at him to "hit the ground."

He did as he was told. Meanwhile, agent O'Connor moved to the front of the plane where Giffe spotted him from the cockpit and fired two shots at the FBI man, missing him both times.

O'Connor, sources say, ducked out of range and gave the order to open fire. Bullets sped into the wheels and the engine that was still running, apparently ripping into a fuel line and causing an emergency signal to light up in the cockpit.

At this point, co-pilot Crump believes, Downs rushed to cut off the engine and Giffe began shooting again. This time, he didn't miss.

The transcript ends with an unanswered question from the control tower — "58 November?" — and the time, 5:33 a.m. Oct. 4.

The "You can't win 'em

FBI Fired And Result Was 3 Dead

all", remark, according to sources who asked not to be named, is part of background conversation audible on the FAA's tape recordings though not included in the transcript obtained by the Post.

NUMBER 701 FOR CHUTIST

NAMAO, Alta. (CP) — The oldest active parachutist in the Canadian Armed Forces' search and rescue division has fulfilled his desire to make 700 jumps before he retires.

Warrant Officer Bob Crebo, 49, made jumps 699, 700 and 701 Monday at this base a few miles north of Edmonton. He retires this month after 31 years in the service.

"A lot of people say that every time you jump you're frightened," he said in an interview. "I've got to disagree with them.

"What does frighten me a bit is jumping into trees on a rescue mission."

WO Crebo joined the Royal Canadian Air Force in 1941 as an air frame mechanic and spent the Second World War in Alaska. In 1946, the air force became responsible for all Canadian search missions and formed a para-rescue group.

His first jump, in February, 1947, started a career in rescue work which took him on missions across Canada.

One of his three sons was born while WO Crebo was combing the wreckage of a military Dakota aircraft in Labrador. The rescue squad had to walk four miles to the crash site, then spent two days there because of foul weather.

Maturity Is Son and No. 7

A Slimmer Harrison Comes of Age

TORONTO (CP) — The times are changing for Jim Harrison, 24-year-old centre of Toronto Maple Leafs.

Gone are the flashy sports car and the paunch, thickened by soft drinks and rich food.

Now it's a house and maturity and a self-imposed restriction on food.

"I knew my job was in jeopardy," said the Bonnyville, Alta., native. "I didn't really expect to be with the Leafs this season because I heard during the summer that I was involved in a lot of trade talk."

A National Hockey League trade in 1969 brought Harrison to Toronto from Boston Bruins in exchange for Wayne Carleton, now with California Golden Seals.

That season Harrison netted 10 goals, increasing the total to 13 last year.

Increasing too was his playing weight. When he left Estevan Bruins of the Western Canada Hockey League, Harrison weighed 185 pounds.

"In training camp (this season) I was up to 200 some days and other days I'd drop right down to 190. Then at training camp they told me that they were unhappy with my lack of stamina.

"They sent me for a complete series of tests and found there was nothing wrong with me and more or less told me to try losing some weight. Now I'm 187 before a practice and it really makes a difference."

There were two other reasons behind Harrison's motivation.

One was the recent birth of son) I was up to 200 some the acquisition of sweater No. 7, once worn by former Leaf great Max Bentley.

He celebrated his son's birth with a goal in the Leafs season opener at Vancouver.

Acquiring Bentley's number earned him the nickname of Max from his team-mates.

"Actually, them calling me Max is kind of a joke. The reason is my stickhandling. Like, it was so brutal, and Max Bentley's was so good, that they started calling me Max. I wanted a single number so I asked for seven to kind of carry the Max thing further."

Harrison's second goal of the year came last Sunday when the Leafs tied the Bruins at Boston. His play in that contest earned him the praise of Leaf coach John McLellan.

"Harrison has really impressed me with his work," McLellan said. "He's settled down and lost that weight . . . I think he's one player who has been helped by marriage."

In the only NHL game tonight, Vancouver Canucks play the Blues in St. Louis.

GETTING PAST Kansas City's tough Willie Lanier can be painful proposition for rival running backs in National Football League. Pittsburgh's John Fuqua is reminded of that fact during this play Monday night in game at Kansas City as he gets slammed by Lanier (63) and is held to three-yard gain. Lanier helped Chiefs thump Steelers 38-16 behind passing of quarterback Lenny Dawson.

For openers, shiny new kudos are awarded today to Victoria's Tommy Druce, and his three-year-old gelding, Shadows Dividend. They've convinced the skeptics. And how!

This is the Ex Park version of the Kentucky Derby saga, the Cinderella story of a horse. In Churchill Downs, it will be recalled that an ugly duckling colt with a malformed leg that went for $1,200 at the Keeneland yearling sales, rose from that modest appraisal to win the run for the roses.

Canonero II was the talk of the town and at Baltimore too, where later he won the Preakness. For those two victories, he won many thousands of dollars. Then he lost the Belmont, and hasn't run since. But that's horse racing!

Meanwhile, a Saanich fireman, Tommy Druce, was operating a one-horse stable at Sandown. Shadows Dividend was his only pride and joy, and had earned him the not too princely total of $1,279 last year.

"Just a plater" is the term usually applied along shedrow to describe such heroics. And even earlier this year, Druce entered Shadow's Dividend in a claiming race, which means that for the price of $4,000, he could have lost his horse. But Shadow's Dividend won that sprint event, and has not raced that cheaply since. Nor will he again. Because since then there have been three more wins, one second, and two thirds, climaxed last Saturday by a victory in the B.C. championship. Also, he handed Command Module, who had beaten him in the B.C. Derby, a crushing defeat.

More so, Shadows Dividend now has earned more than $30,000 for Druce this season. Not bad for a horse which, until recently, was ferried across the strait from Sandown for each engagement, and got nothing but better with each of those races.

Horse of the Year? Maybe. But for certain, he must rate as the top B.C.-bred. Make that Island-bred! Druce bought him as a yearling from Mrs. Alice Walker of Nanaimo for only $800. And what a bargain that was!

Oh, the trainer? That's Tommy Druce, too. This is truly a one-man, one-horse stable, and a very proud one.

Learn a fact a day department:

Did you know that the common rat can go longer without water than a camel? I didn't either until a recent reading bee, and it did at least seem interesting. Significant? Not likely. Just consider it a bonus item.

DISA and DATA—Curling fans may be interested in the fact that former Canadian champion Lyall Dagg will be a guest on Keith MacKenzie's "All About Curling" program Wednesday night on Channel 10 . . . football fans in the fact that if Ted Gerela isn't being considered by the B.C. Lions for next season, he has an offer from the NFL to fall back on . . . racing fans in the item that on CBUT Sportscene this Thursday there will be a profile on Jack Short, the voice of the races, who on Saturday called his 21,999th race in 38 years . . . and all fans in the anecdote that arrived in the post from a reader who recounts the following Damon Runyan story in which a famous gambler allegedly died of a heart attack right in the middle of a high-stakes poker game: "After the body was removed, one of the other players noticing that the dead man's hand was still face down on the table, reached over and picked it up. When he saw it he sadly shook his head, saying 'He never would have made it anyway'."

Then there has to be that delightful quote from coach Fred Glover of the California Golden Seals. Make that ex-coach Glover. When he was relieved of his duties by general manager Gary Young last week, Glover said: "I think Hal Laycoe and I have something in common. I spent three years here as an NHL coach. Then I got a new boss, and lasted only three games. When Laycoe was fired by Los Angeles Kings, his now famous comment was: "I spent 24 years preparing for the job as coach in the NHL, and I lasted only 24 games."

Personally, the death of Joe (the bartender) Spark last week came as a shock. Here was what it termed in the vernacular "a nice guy" who, as a prisoner of war, survived that infamous "death march." In earlier days he was a good basketball player, but most of all, it is a simple mark of respect that there are many in the city who felt honored to call him "friend."

CURT FLOOD
. . . claims slavery

Flood Suit To Be Heard

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States Supreme Court agreed today to hear Curt Flood's suit against professional baseball and to rule on the sport's immunity from anti-trust laws.

The former all-star centrefielder, now living somewhere in Europe, has claimed ever since St. Louis Cardinals traded him in 1949 to Philadelphia Phillies that baseball's contract violates both state and federal anti-trust laws and is a form of slavery. His chief lawyer is Arthur Goldberg, former Supreme Court justice.

The court did not comment on any of the issues. The case will be heard later this term.

The target of Flood's attack is the so-called "reserve system," which binds ballplayers to the team that holds their contract.

END SPECIAL STATUS

Two lower federal courts have ruled against Flood and a decision by the high court is expected by June.

The appeal said there is no logical reason to treat baseball differently from other sports, particularly since amateur players now are subject to a draft, franchises are moved from city to city and national television has become a major source of revenue.

Flood refused to report to the Phillies, who obtained his contract in a multi-player deal that also involved Richie Allen, Tim McCarver and other big leaguers.

After he sat out the 1970 season, Flood's contract was assigned to Washington Senators for 1971. He played in a few games, but his skills were obviously diminished by the layoff and he left the Senators.

Flood was required to play with the Phillies or drop out of baseball and give up his salary. No other club could sign him. The appeal said this "boycott" cost him more than $100,000 in 1970 alone.

Weaver Again Snubbed

NEW YORK (AP) — Dick Williams of Oakland Athletics, fired two years ago by Boston Red Sox, was named Monday as The Associated Press' Manager of the Year in the American League.

Williams, 42, who in his first year as manager of the Athletics guided them to a runaway 16-game margin the AL West Division with a 101-60 record, received 107 votes in nationwide balloting by sports writers and sportscasters.

Bob Lemon of Kansas City Royals finished second with 66 votes, and Earl Weaver of Baltimore Orioles third with 59.

It was the third straight year Weaver, whose Orioles have won three consecutive AL pennants, failed to win the award. Ted Williams of Washington won in 1969 and Ralph Houk of New York Yankees won it last year.

PLENTY OF TALENT ON FARM

Still Best Says Earl

BALTIMORE (AP) — The former world champion Baltimore Orioles could be the team to beat in 1972 — and there's a lot of young farm-club talent to help them.

Room will have to be made on next year's roster for at least two players from Baltimore's club system as the Orioles seek their fourth straight American League pennant.

Three Baltimore farm clubs won championships during the season, including a second straight in the all-rookie Appalachian League.

THIRD IN HISTORY

"This still is the best damn team in baseball," manager Earl Weaver said Sunday after the Orioles had been upset in the World Series for the second time in three years.

"We'll prove it next year," he added "when we win 100 games for the fourth straight season."

The Orioles this year became only the third team in history to win at least 100 games three years in a row.

But the loss to Pittsburgh Pirates in the World Series tarnishes the record somewhat.

The Orioles added five new faces to their 25-man roster after beating Cincinnati Reds in the 1970 World Series, and more changes are due before next season.

MAY SEEK PITCHER

If the Orioles do barter, they probably will be looking for more pitching — despite a starting rotation of four 20-game winners — and possibly a catcher.

MURTAUGH DELAYS DECISION

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Will Danny Murtaugh return as manager of the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates next year?

"I'll decide in the next month or so if I'll return," the 54-year-old manager had said during the World Series.

Murtaugh, looking pale and tired after the final game, says a decision would be made only because of his health.

He resigned four years after the Pirates won the world championship in 1960 because of a heart ailment. But he has returned twice since — in 1967, only for a year because of a second heart attack, and last year when he led the Pirates to a division title.

Arfons Calls It Quits After Dragster Tragedy

DALLAS (AP) — Record-holding driver Art Arfons said Monday he has quit auto racing after a high-speed crash Saturday that took the lives of three persons, including a passenger in his jet-powered dragster.

The mishap occurred on a quarter-mile demonstration run at Dallas International Motor Speedway in suburban Lewisville.

Arfons was asked in a telephone interview from his home in Dayton, Ohio, whether he will race again.

"No," he replied, "I had planned on keeping my cars running for, oh, several years because that is how I make my living. And I'll just find something else to do now."

Prior to Saturday's crash, racing officials said Arfons planned to retire from racing the jet-engined car with which he had been attempting to break the 300-mile-an-hour barrier in the quarter mile.

But he was not going to give up racing altogether, they said.

Bill Dale of the International Hot Rod Association said Arfons set the world land speed record in the quarter mile of 293 m.p.h. two weeks ago in Florida. On the fatal demonstration run Saturday, his car was approaching a speed of 286 m.p.h., track officials said.

Arfons was unhurt.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

Is your aim good?

Len Had Some Kind Of a Sore Flipper!

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Len Dawson of Kansas City Chiefs should have a sore arm more often.

The 36-year-old Chiefs' quarterback claimed all last week he had a sore elbow. Then he went out Monday night and bombed Pittsburgh Steelers 38-16 in their American Football Conference game.

Dawson had bountiful help from receiver Otis Taylor and the Chiefs' vaunted defence which ignited Kansas City's sagging offence by setting up two touchdowns and scoring another on Emmitt Thomas' 32-yard pass interception return in the closing moments.

82-YARD PLAY

One of Dawson's bombs was an 82-yarder during Kansas City's four-touchdown explosion in the second period. It didn't score, but set up a 27-yard touchdown pass to Taylor that just about put the game out of reach of the young Steelers, who had paraded ahead 9-0 on Roy Gerela's three field goals.

Dawson also hurled touchdown passes of 27 yards to Taylor and five yards to rookie Elmo Wright. Ed Podolak scored the fourth touchdown on a one-yard run.

DEFENCE STIFFENS

After that the Chiefs never were able to do much against the young Steelers, except for an 11-yard field goal on the first play of the final quarter by Jan Stenerud, who converted after all five touchdowns and Thomas' theft.

The Steelers didn't score again until the fourth quarter, when John Fuqua bolted over from the one-yard line, ending a 17-yard drive that took five plays.

COUGARS HOPE TO STOP SKID

Victoria Cougars will be out to snap a four game losing streak in the Western Canada Hockey League while playing host to Calgary Centennials tonight at Memorial Arena.

And to make the task harder, Calgary is the only club to beat Cougars in three home games this season.

Cougars dropped road games in Edmonton, Medicine Hat and Swift Current at the weekend.

"Playing against unfamiliar clubs in unfamiliar arenas really cost us," said Cougar-coach Fred Hucul. "We hope the Victoria fans will give our team a boost tonight."

Calgary started the Cougars' losing streak last week by recording a 5-4 overtime decision over the Victoria club.

Cats will probably be missing two regulars in the game tonight — goaltender Dave Maynard and Gary Howatt. Maynard has a sprained thumb and Howatt was to receive medical attention today for a knee injury.

Victoria general manager Eric Bishop, currently negotiating with Scotty Munro, owner-manager-coach of the Calgary club, for player help added: "If we play the close-checking game we're capable of, I think we can beat the Centennials."

Game time tonight is 8.

Celebration in Pittsburgh 'Got a Little Out of Hand'

PITTSBURGH (AP) — The big World Series victory demonstration was a "jubilant celebration that got a little out of hand," the city's top police official says. The mayor calls it "an over-exuberant celebration."

The 10-hour celebration in the downtown area that attracted an estimated 100,000 people left these results:

—Hospital treatment for 128 persons.

—Arrests of 98 persons.

—Vandalizing of downtown shops.

—Cars heavily damaged, many with caved in roofs.

—A fire engine stripped of equipment.

—A hotel forced to close temporarily.

—Tons of debris left in the streets.

Police Supt. Robert E. Colville called a news conference Monday to "set the record straight" about what happened. Mayor Peter Flaherty said "the national news media" blew things out of proportion.

CLAIMS NO RAPES

Colville said stories about rapes and criminal assaults on downtown streets were fabricated by reporters. During the celebration Sunday night a police desk sergeant reported a dozen rapes.

Colville said the demonstration which erupted after the Pittsburgh Pirates' 2-1 seventh game World Series baseball clincher over the Orioles at Baltimore was just a "jubilant celebration that got a little out of hand."

Earlier, Flaherty toured areas of the city where clean-up crews were carting away tons of debris.

As for the eyewitness accounts of many couples involved in various stages of lovemaking in a park near the main congregating area, Colville said that was "nothing unusual."

Season-Fusing Is Confusing, Snoopy Once Again Denied

Creator of Peanuts Talks About 'His Kids' and Hockey

By GERALD ESKENAZI
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Snoopy, every fan in dog's clothing, has been denied once again. The National Hockey League season has begun, Charles M. Schulz, the creator of "Peanuts" said somewhat sadly: "Snoopy thinks he's a great player. He's going to be disappointed when he gets to Detroit this year and finds that Gordie Howe has retired — Snoopy wanted to give him an oboe."

There is the temptation, when talking to Schulz, to ask whether he really is talking about himself when he discusses his characters, whom he calls "the kids." They have their frustrations when they pick up a baseball, football, basketball or puck. Linus, riddled with insecurity, cries when he misses a ball. Lucy, strong-willed, may really be afraid of defeat. Charlie Brown is willing and eager — and a failure. Snoopy goes through life day-dreaming in front of his dog house, the balloons over his head nearly black-and-white fantasies depicting exploits he will never accomplish.

But Schulz is an active fan and player. Hockey is his game, beginning from the Sunday nights in St. Paul in the 1930s and continuing to northern California where he roots, fittingly, for Charles O. Finley's California Golden Seals, one of history's most star-crossed teams.

Schulz, a 48-year-old, right-handed shot, plays right wing at the Redwood Empire Arena, an hour's drive north of San Francisco. Schulz is always assured of a game — he owns the rink.

"Because of Snoopy's hockey playing," said Schulz, "I have to keep in the game. So I bought an arena." He is also a season ticket-holder for the Seals who, he insists, "Will stop people from laughing when we win the Stanley Cup."

Snoopy's playing has been limited. The only game "the kids" usually play is baseball because "it's more introspective. It's easier to put in a comic strip. In baseball, you have moments between the action when you have time for little insights. You just don't have those moments in other sports."

Snoopy's most famous hockey games have pitted him against a ragged bird. They play on a frozen bird bath. "The bird always beats him — after all, it's the bird's home ice," said Schulz.

Once, he put Lucy into a game. But she embarrassed everyone when she shouted, "Okay, throw me the hockey ball." One of the characters turned to Charlie Brown and said, "She was your idea."

Schulz tried to imagine what it would be like if his kids really did play. Here is what he found:

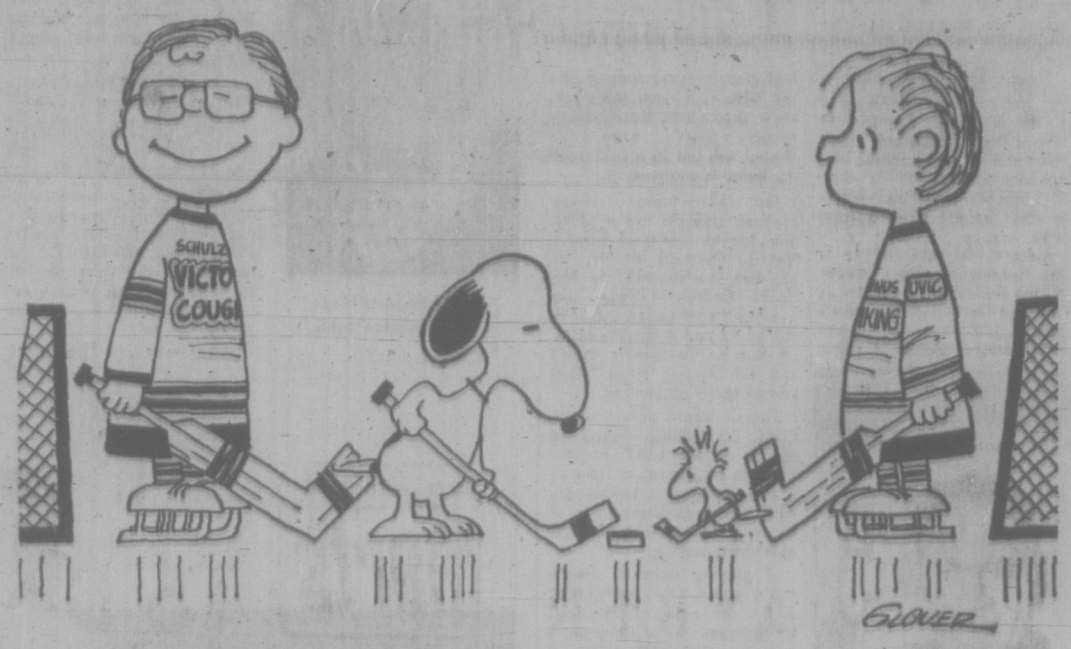
● Lucy would be "raggle-taggle. All over the ice." But isn't she so self-sufficient? "Ah," said Schulz. "We don't know what she's really like deep down."

● Charlie Brown, on the other hand, "Would be the type who always played in position. He knows how the game should be paayed. He's a student."

● Snoopy? "He thinks he's great. But he's only an expansion player. He always wanted to play golf. He imagined himself playing against Ben Hogan and telling Hogan, 'You're away.'"

● And Linus? "He'd be deft. He'd be like that dark-haired guy on the Rangers — Rod Gilbert. But I'd probably have to use Linus's blanket on the bench, like Gatorade.

The fusing together of the sports seasons has confused Schulz, and deprived his hockey fans. On Sunday, for instance there were major-league baseball, basketball, football and hockey games. Schulz had hoped to have Snoopy start the hockey season on time. "I got mixed up this year," Schulz admitted.



Without any of his characters, the rest of the National Hockey League doesn't stand much chance in stopping either the Montreal Canadiens or Boston Bruins, Schulz believes. He will continue, however, to root for the Seals.

Schulz's arena has an extensive hockey program. He recently participated in a tournament against — get ready now — a Korean team. Is Schulz about to turn pro?

"I can't afford to play hockey," he said, coming back to reality. "I have to draw comic strips."

The list of club champions has been completed, and it has been an impressive march by district golf's kiddie corps.

Wayne O'Malley of Cedar Hill, Mike Gray of Uplands and Bruce Chisholm of Colwood finalized the list Sunday.

George Bigelow of Victoria, Marty Richards of Glen Meadows and Dave Mick of Gorge Vale made it the previous weekend.

But for Richards and the 62-year-old Bigelow, successes were carved out by golfers under the age of 25. Eleven of the 24 district semi-finanists were intermediates or juniors.

O'Malley, winner of the Cedar Hill junior crown earlier this year, competed a double with his two-up victory over Ron Griffis.

Gray, two up after 18 holes, defeated Ted Pollard 4 and 3 in the Uplands final while Chisholm had to go 37 holes to claim Colwood's title from another intermediate, Jim MacMurran.

Chisholm, who joined Colwood from Edmonton about two months ago, was two up after 18, then trailed by one after 27. He was two down with two to go, but forced the extra hole by winning 17 wih a birdie and 18 with a par. He also won the 37th with a par.

Although a freshman, Victoria's Carl Schwantje is making a strong pitch for a berth on Oregon's varsity golf team. The former B.C. Amateur champion was leading the way after the first three of 10 qualifying rounds.

Another Victorian in the scholarship class, Jim Girard is "growing and practicing" before launching his bid for a spot on the Oklahoma State team.

With the help of good food and a weight-training program, the former Cedar Hill member has added 10 pounds. Labron Harris, Sr., likes his golfers to work out with weights at least three times a week, and run eight to 10 miles.

Girard has played only about eight complete rounds since starting school. Most of his golf time has been spent on the practice field.

SHORT CHIPS: Ab Robertson, Al Dowds and Bob Bell all carded net 67s to share top honors in the Victoria and District Golf Committee's field day at Broome Hill . . . And chairman Harry Young once again was a member of the winning team, a distinction he has missed only once since the field day was introduced several years ago . . .

And things aren't too hot for Dr. John Nicolaides, head of the Notre Dame aerospace engineering program and U.S. Army-Navy ballistics expert . . . An eight-handicapper in golf, the professor spent three years studying golf ball design before coming up with a revolutionary design for the Uniroyal people . . . The ball is called Royal Plus 6 (because it's supposed to be good for an extra six yards off the tee) . . . Uniroyal, on Nicolaides' say-so, kissed 336 round dimples goodbye and introduced 252 random Hexagonal-shaped dimples on their ball . . . The change, they say, gives added lift and carry . . . But all that study has wrecked Dr. Nicolaide's game . . . "I'm so curious about the flight of the ball," he said ruefully, "I look up on every shot!"

Tyees Crush Runners To Stretch Win Streak

John McGuire's three-goal performance Monday powered the surging Victoria Tyees to an 8-0 triumph over Reynolds Roadrunners and a stranglehold on first place in the Victoria Senior High Schools Soccer League.

It was the ninth consecutive victory in as many starts this season for Tyees, who remained three points ahead of defending-champion Mount View Hornets. Hornets romped to a 4-0 decision over Oak Bay, Mount Douglas defeated Esquimalt 6-3, and Claremont edged Belmont 2-1 in other games.

Gary McLaren and Bob Duncan scored two goals each and Garnet Moen booted in another to complete the Tyees' rout.

First-HALF SURGE

Mount View scored all of their goals in the first half as Barry Hilton counted twice and Doug Bisson and Bagicha Baines added singles.

Second-half efforts produced wins for Mt. Doug and Claremont.

Leading 3-2 at half time, Mt. Doug went on to score three more goals in the second half as linkman Bruce Coulter and centre-forward Ron Smith netted two goals each, and Brett Large and Bruce Fougner booted singles. Halfback Dave Lale scored all three goals for Esquimalt.

Belmont led 1-0 at the intermission on a goal by Rick Sylvester, but Claremont got the equalizer 15 minutes into the second half when Chris Finestones scored. Striker Fred King banged in the winner with less than a minute remaining.

ONE-UNDER-PAR score of 141 gave Ontario golfer Gary Cowan (above) one-stroke victory today in 36-hole New Zealand centennial amateur tournament at Auckland. Cowan, current U.S. amateur king, edged British champion Mike Bonallack. Tourney preceded Commonwealth team event, which begins Wednesday.

Stocker Snipers Tough on Toffey

Ron Toffey must have felt like the only duck in sight on opening day of hunting season.

Despite his discomfort, Toffey survived at Memorial Arena Monday night. Perhaps just barely.

Toffey, a goaltender in the Stuffy McGinnis Men's Hockey League, faced 59 shots as Stockers North Americans shell-shocked Empress Paint, 9-2. Worse than that, Empress had but 10 shots on the Stockers' net.

The score could have been much higher but for the brilliant goaltending of Toffey, who turned aside 18 shots in the first and third periods and foiled 14 scoring attempts in the second.

Graham Brown was the big gun for Stockers, who took sole possession of first place. Brown rifled in three goals, all in the third period, and Murray Harrison found the target twice.

Dave Williams, Bryan Butterworth, Gerry Caldwell and Garry Hales scored one goal each for Stockers.

In a second game, Ingraham Buckaroos moved into a tie with CFB Blues with a 7-2 win. Dale Barber scored three goals and Tom Allan netted two for the Buckaroos. Chris Widner and Gord Wichware added singles for the winners, while Ray Gregoire and George Fisher scored for the Blues.

Tokyo Giants Take Series

TOKYO (AP) — Tokyo Yomiuri Giants walloped Hankyu Braves 6-1 Sunday capturing a record seventh Japan Series championship before a near capacity crowd of 43,500 at Korakuen Stadium.

The Giants took the Japanese version of United States major league baseball's World Series with four triumphs and one defeat.

The Central League champion Giants, the oldest professional baseball club in Japan, won the opener 2-1 last Tuesday but lost the second game 8-6.

VICTORIA FIVEPINNERS ELIMINATED

Calgary Bowler Leads

SASKATOON — Two out of three Victorians survived qualifying tests Saturday in the second annual Saskatchewan fivepin bowling classic but lost out in the match-play competition Sunday.

King Lee finished sixth in the eight-game qualifying test and Jake Jacob, the reigning B.C. Master champion, placed 30th. Both won one match-play series before dropping the next two and being eliminated from both the "A" and "B" sides of the draw.

Marvin Larson of Victoria failed to collect one of the 32 match-play berths.

Norm Goldie, a former Victorian now living in Calgary, topped the list of qualifiers with 2,378 for eight games to collect $150.

Jim O'Neill of Calgary fired a 300 in his final game Sunday to down Al Hong of Saskatoon 753-739 in the championship final and won the $1,000 top prize. Hong collected $500 as runner-up while Dave Sanderson of Winnipeg and Bud Knight of Moose Jaw, the losing semi-finalists, picked up $150 each.

HOCKEY TIPS

By Bobby Orr

Every boy should have a full set of equipment BEFORE he starts to play hockey. Proper equipment lessens the chances of injury and for young boys, hockey injuries can be serious if helmets or pads are left off in a practice.

I know that most players in the National Hockey League refuse to wear helmets. I don't wear one myself. But all junior players must wear them and eventually, more and more players coming into the NHL will have worn helmets throughout their hockey career. That's when the league will put in a rule making helmets compulsory.

Pounds of Protection

But for minor hockey players, helmets are a must. And for a very good reason. The professional player, by the time he reaches the National Hockey League, has mastered the fundamentals of the game and is used to being on skates. Youngsters aren't and the easiest check often knocks them backwards.

Never wear loose equipment. Everything should fit snugly on the body. I wear my own equipment as tight as I can without it interfering with blood circulation. It is the only way I feel comfortable when playing.

If playing defence, attach ankle guards to your skates. Extra protection is required to protect your feet against low shots that might break an ankle.

After each game and practice, it is important to properly air and dry all equipment. Hang up your shoulder pads, pants, sweater and other gear so that they will dry out as quickly as possible. And don't forget to wipe your skates to prevent rust. This only takes a minute but it makes sure that hour skates are in top condition all season.

Dotten Helped Launch League

VANCOUVER (CP) — Funeral services were scheduled in suburban Burquitlam today for Frank Dotten, one of the funders of what later became the Western Hockey League.

Dotten, a native of Edmonton, died at Vanderhoof at the age of 55.

He played amateur hockey in Vancouver and later for the Seattle Ironmen, Sudbury, and the New York Rovers.

He returned to Vancouver in 1943 from Montreal and operated the old New Westminster Lodestars. Dotten, George Shooter of Vancouver, and Al Leader of Seattle operated teams in Portland, Seattle and Bremerton, during the Second World War.

In 1947 he was owner, manager, coach and player of the old Seattle Ironmen and also operated the San Diego Flyers.

When directors voted that the Pacific Coast Hockey League go professional in 1948, he sold the San Diego club but continued to operate the Seattle team which he sold in 1954.

Quebec Hockey Chief Protests Player Deal

MONTREAL (CP)—A ruling by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association allowing 17-year-old Jacques Cossette to play for Montreal Junior Canadiens of the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, was strongly criticized Monday by the Quebec Junior A Hockey League.

QJAHL president Robert Le Bel charged, in a telegram sent to CAHA president Joe Kryczka of Calgary, that the CAHA decision "may have fatal consequences in the junior hockey category in the province of Quebec."

During the summer, Canadiens general manager Phil Wimmer signed an agreement with the QJAHL, agreeing to participate in the league's midget draft of Quebec players.

He pulled out because the league did not live up to it, he said.

Wimmer said the signing would not pose any problems for the Montreal club because it had not been notarized.

Sorel Black Hawks of the Quebec league made Cossette their first pick in the draft but Montreal invited the Rouyn, Que., native to their training camp in September and the player never reported to Sorel.

The Rouyn area does not come under the jurisdiction of the Quebec Amateur Hockey Association and therefore any team is permitted to take players from there, Wimmer said.

Pats Have Sobchuk and 10 Holdovers

REGINA CLUB RAISES SIGHTS

EARL INGARFIELD
. . . at Regina helm

(Ninth of a Series)
By ERNIE FEDORUK

The two questions that Western Canada Hockey League fans have been asking of Regina Pats are:

1. Is Dennis Sobchuk really a five-for-one player?

2. Will Earl Ingarfield have any trouble filling Bob Turner's coaching shoes?

President and general manager Del Wilson accentuates the positive in both cases. Each in his own fashion, the newcomers are expected to show Regina the way to a lofty finish in the Eastern Division.

The 36-year-old Ingarfield ended a 15-year professional playing career to suceed Turner as coach.

Sobchuk, a centre who topped all scorers in the Saskatchewan Junior League while playing for Weyburn Red Wings last season, was one of the most sought-after players in the west. To obtain Sobchuk from New Westminster Bruins, the Pats gave up five players — Wayne Dye, Vic Mercredi, Emile Demoissac, Bob Hess and Doug Linskog.

It could be a big year for Regina's rookies because goaltender Ed Staniowski and defenceman Greg Jolly also have been drawing pre-season raves.

Ingarfield inherited 10 holdovers from a club that finished fourth in the Eastern Division. The total includes goaltender Bernie Germaine and four defencemen — Dwight Bialowas, Nellie Greene, John Dobie and Doug Marit.

Returning forwards are Rich Urich, Scott Smith, Al Barrett, Ken Marit and Brad Anderson.

Regina homebrews Glen Ing, Billy Bell and Jackie Most are other rookies who have been impressive.

"I had been looking at a possible third-place finish," said Wilson. "But the way things are going, I'm convinced we could set our sights higher.

"We no longer have any worries about depth and balance. It will be a bigger club than we had last year, with greater scoring punch. All four of last year's defencemen are back, and the goaltending looks very solid.

"And like all Regina teams, they can skate."

Next: Winnipeg Jets.

Computer Analyses Juveniles

MOSCOW (NYT) — An unusual report on juvenile crime made available in a Soviet law journal has noted a decline of offences among younger teen-agers but a rise among older children involved in assault and robbery, sex crimes and rowdyism.

The Soviet report, limited to a single republic — Estonia — and to the 14-17 age group, provided unusual insight into the background of youthful offenders, relating the character of the crimes to family background, occupation, use of alcohol and other factors.

The researchers, who used computers in the analysis of court and police records, urged the automation of crime-data processing on a national basis so that the causes of youthful crime could be established and effective measures taken.

SECRET

Comprehensive crime statistics are secret in the Soviet Union and detailed analyses may not even be available, judging from the recommendation in the Estonian report. There was no indication to what extent the findings in the small republic, with a population of 1.4 million and a fairly high standard of living, applied to the entire Soviet Union, with 240 million people and a wide regional range of social conditions.

However, the Estonian report, though limited to a relatively small part of the country, does illuminate an aspect of life that has long been regarded as highly sensitive by Soviet authorities. Serious analysis of crime was long ignored on the ground that it was merely a survival of the capitalist past and not an intregral part of a socialist society.

The report, published in the October issue of the monthly Sovetskoye Gosudarstvo I Pravo (Soviet State and Law), was written by H. A. Randalu, a jurist associated with the the Institute of Economics of the Estonian Academy of Sciences in Tallinn, the Estonian capital.

THEFT DOWN

Limiting his computer analysis of trial and police records to the last few years, he found that petty theft, usually committed by 14-to-15 year olds, had declined over the period 1965-70 while more serious crimes against persons and against public order, associated with 16-to-17 year olds, had increased.

The total number of youthful offenders, Randalu said, had remained virtually unchanged during the study period except for slight year-to-year fluctuations. But under that surface stabilization, the trend has been toward more serious crimes among older teen-agers, he added.

Correlating types of crime with the backgrounds of offenders, the jurist found that rowdyism was particularly common among working teenagers, who accounted for 55 per cent of this type of offence. The highest incidence occurred in the textile-mill town of Narva, where the rate of teen-age employment is also the highest in Estonia.

SERIOUS OFFENCES

Assault and robbery, sex crimes and other serious offences against persons were found to be most common among teen-agers who were neither in school nor employed. Although this category accounted for only 16 per cent of all offences in the 14-17 age group, it represented 19.4 per cent of youthful sex crimes, 21.5 per cent of crimes against persons, and one-third of all assaults with intent to rob.

The role of alcohol, which was found to have increased steadily during the 1965-70 period, was said to be relatively minor in cases of embezzlement of state property — 13 per cent of all offences — and in thefts of personal property — 22 per cent.

But in more serious offences, intoxication was found to be a factor in 44 per cent of crimes against persons, in 56 per cent of assaults and robbery, 61 per cent in rape cases, and 76 per cent of the incidences of rowdyism.

The Estonian study also related youthful offences to school-leaving age, and the level of education, in turn, to the presence of an alcoholic father in the family.

Shell Car Guard stations guarantee their work for 3 months or 4,000 miles.

And you receive a certificate to prove it.

Guarantee

When your Shell Car Guard dealer does repair or maintenance work he will give you a written guarantee backed by Shell Canada Limited.

This guarantee lasts for 3 months or 4,000 miles on parts and labour and is explained in detail on the actual Car Guard Guarantee Certificate.

It's reassuring to know there's a station nearby where your car can be serviced so expertly that you receive a written guarantee.

The reason we can give a guarantee is because of the way we work. All jobs start with a thorough inspection of the problem area. Our Car Guard technicians have both the skill and equipment to find the problem without fiddling, tire-kicking or guesswork.

That way you don't have to buy a new carburetor when all you need is a minor adjustment.

No surprise bills

At every Car Guard Station you know exactly what's happening to your car. There are no surprise repairs—or bills.

If we discover a major replacement part is required, we will not proceed with the work until we have your permission. And we'll always tell you why the replacement is needed, and what it will cost.

That's a good thing to know. Especially if you're not knowledgeable about car repairs.

So, if your car needs servicing, remember these six important points that set a Shell Car Guard Station apart.

1. All work backed by Shell Canada Limited for 3 months or 4,000 miles.
2. No work is undertaken without your approval.
3. Fully trained and qualified mechanics will work on your car.
4. Original equipment quality replacement parts are used.
5. There is a published list of prices for standard repair and maintenance work.
6. You receive an itemized bill so you know what you're paying for.

See for yourself

If your car is giving trouble, if you'd like to have it checked out, or if you just want to see how a super service station operates, drive in to a nearby Shell Car Guard Station.

Look for the distinctive red, yellow and blue sign and talk to the men in the smart blue uniforms. Ask them about their special Tune-Up which can put your car in tip top condition for winter driving.

Get an engine tune-up — for good, clean mileage

Car Guard technicians begin the tune-up with an electronic test of your car's engine. Everything is checked: fuel pump, carburetor, plugs, points, timing — the entire fuel and ignition systems.

When all engine problems have been diagnosed, the tune-up gets under way. However, no new parts will be installed without your permission.

And remember, for good clean mileage, a properly tuned engine will give you better mileage and reduce harmful exhaust emissions.

Visit the Shell Car Guard station nearest you. Check these convenient locations.

Last-Chance Vote in December On Malaspina College Link

DUNCAN — Cowichan School District residents will get their last chance in December to say whether they want to continue to participate in the Malaspina Regional College at Nanaimo.

Trustees agreed at a special meeting Monday evening to hold a plebiscite along with last December civic elections because they are concerned with the "steadily increasing burden the property owner is being asked to carry."

"The college council is now formulating plans for the establishment of a permanent college campus in Nanaimo and will likely be submitting to each participating board a request to proceed with a capital building referendum," said Trustee Stan Turner.

"We must know what the people of the Cowichan Valley want before we decide on this.

Turner explained after the meeting that the initial three-year operation of the college in temporary facilities will end in 1972. He added that if the Cowichan people say they no longer wish to participate in the college concept that the school board would not agree to capital construction.

Before a construction referendum can be held in the Regional College District all participating school boards (which includes Lake Cowichan, Nanaimo, Ladysmith, and Qualicum school districts) must agree to it.

Turner said if local taxpayers voted to continue Cowichan trustees will agree to the referendum.

"Then the referendum must have 60 per cent vote of approval within the whole college district to pass," Turner noted.

He said the vote will not be broken down into areas and that even if Cowichan turns down the construction referendum and the other districts pass it, it will go through.

"This is why we must know what the people want."

Turner said that if a new college is not constructed then the concept will probably "become null and void."

Board Chairman Dave Haywood stressed, "we have got to stop walking on the fence. We must either be a fully participating member and abandon our efforts to have the financial structure rearranged or get out of the college completely."

In May, 1970, the Cowichan board opted out of the college stating that the cost-sharing agreement was unfair.

Six months later, after a promise from the other participating boards to re-negotiate cost-sharing, Cowichan went back in.

Since then trustees said they have had six "unsuccessful" meetings.

"Several proposals were put forward by Cowichan," Haywood explained. "All of these have been totally rejected by the other participating boards and it now is obvious that further negotiations would be meaningless."

He said proposals included:

● Modification of the present method of sharing in-district operation costs to recognize both the assessment factor and the attendance factor. This formula included a minimum guarantee of the assessment factor to insure some financial stability from each school district.

● Establish a permanent campus of Malaspina College in the Ladysmith School District. This would enable a majority of the students an opportunity to commute to the college campus.

● Elimination of the academic programs at the college. The elimination of these programs would greatly reduce the local tax burden to the propety owner and concentrate the development of the college towards the technical and vocational programs.

. . . "we must know"

The proposed plebiscite, which is not considered a money bylaw so will be voted on by all residents, will give the people a second opportunity to state whether they agree with the community college.

Many feel the first plebiscite in 1967 was just asking did they agree with the idea and was not a go-ahead for establishment.

Beings From Outer Space Visit Earth, Scientist Says

BURNABY (CP) — Instead of planning expensive space probes, scientists should be trying to communicate with creatures who are already visiting the earth from other planets, Stanton T. Friedman, an American nuclear and space scientist said Monday.

"I am convinced that the earth is being visited by intelligently controlled vehicles whose origin is outside the earth," he told 200 Simon Fraser University students.

Friedman, who spent 14 years working on the development of advanced nuclear and space systems for the U.S. government, says there have been enough sightings of saucers and occupants by technically trained observers, including engineers, astronauts, astronomers, pilots and physicists, to convince him they are visiting this planet.

Friedman, who gave descriptions and showed pictures of some of the most recently sighted UFO's, said they are showing a remarkable similarity. They are usually round, saucer or hat-shaped, metallic, capable of vertical takeoffs and sudden changes of direction, noiseless, without exhaust, at least 30 feet in diameter, and able to travel 10,000 miles an hour. "There's nothing on earth to explain them."

Friedman said the best descriptions of the occupants indicate they are "humanoid" creatures, much like humans, but with grey skin, slitted eyes, long arms and legs.

Gas Pipeline Said Overdue But Malaspina Price High

DUNCAN — A pipeline to bring natural gas from the mainland to Vancouver Island should have been constructed a long time ago, provincial Liberal leader Pat McGeer said in Duncan Monday evening.

"But it should be done the cheapest way possible."

McGeer made these statements at two separate meetings. He was guest speaker at a Duncan Rotary Club dinner meeting as well as main speaker at the Cowichan-Malahat Liberal Party's annual general meeting.

McGeer said he is disturbed by Premier Bennett's decision to accept the highest bid of $105 million by Malaspina Gas in preference to the lowest by B.C. Hydro of $45 million.

McGeer said the premier had stated that the bid from Malaspina was "best suited."

"The taxpayer is going to pay the difference," he stressed.

McGeer pointed out that Canada's natural gas is being sold to the U.S. to produce electrical power in many of the country's major cities. "Until just recently natural gas was being sold there cheaper than we could buy it in B.C."

LOWER RATE

He said the American rate for electricity is lower than the Canadian rate.

McGeer said that although a substantial amount of natural gas from B.C. and Alberta is used to generate American power an average housewife on Vancouver Island pays $9.98 for 500 kilowatts while the same amount of electricity costs $5.40 in Seattle, $6.50 in Portland and $9.50 in Los Angeles.

"We should remember always who our best customers are but we shouldn't give away anything."

McGeer said that if the national government had remembered this and had set a favorable atmosphere he is sure Canada would not have been turned down by the U.S. when asking that the 10 per cent surtax on imports be lifted.

"We should be regarding the 'States' in proportion to the type of trade we have with them," McGeer pointed out. "They are also our best customers as tourists here in B.C. We should never, never forget it and our national government should never forget it."

McGEER
. . . criticizes premier

McGeer said that all tariff barriers should be lifted and a North American common market should be established. "I know that it terrifies protectionists in Eastern Canada but if we are to reach our destiny this must be done."

McGeer said that instead of Canada studying policies on "how to get rid of Americans we should be finding ways on how to do more trade with them. I feel that if we had done this before the atmosphere would have been turned around when the States instituted the 10 per cent curtax."

SCOUTS HAVE TALKFEST

Radio contacts with four stations in Tokyo, and others in various parts of the United States and Canada were made on the weekend when the Sidney Scout Hall became the scene of a world-wide radio jamboree for boy scouts and cubs.

A total of 53 radio contacts were made under the supervision of Victoria Shortwave Club members George Heron and Sid Young, both of Sidney.

Young said one of the main objects of the exercise was to prove that the hall could be used for emergency communications. He added that there were between 30 and 40 ham radio hobbyists in the Sidney area.

District regional Scout commissioner Geoff Simmons was among the 60-odd visitors that called at the hall to watch the proceedings.

COBBLE HILL — A Victoria couple and a Mill Bay youth are in satisfactory condition in the Cowichan District Hospital after the cars they were riding in collided Monday evening.

Grant McNab, 34, and his wife Patricia, 35, both of 59 South Turner Street, Victoria, were travelling in one car while 16-year-old Michael Boyles was driving the second.

Boyles' passenger David Nash, 15, of Mill Bay, escaped injury.

Shawnigan Lake RCMP said the cars collided after one vehicle went out of control and struck the second in the rear and burst into flames.

During the sessions Doug Gordon of B.C. Hydro in Vancouver will speak on Concepts of Lighting Design, architect P. E. Hansen will talk on Lighting and Architectural Design and W. A. Dalrymple, vice-president of Emerson Electric Canada, will speak on Dominate, Co-ordinate or Capitulate.

The program also includes a panel discussion with electrical engineer John Hall acting as moderator.

Esquimalt Permits Soar

Building permits totalling about $3,600,000 have been issued so far in 1971 in the municipality of Esquimalt, according to the regular report to council of Municipal Engineer C. T. Warren.

This is more than half a million dollars up from 1970, he reported Monday.

The major permit issued last month was for a 35-suite apartment at 734 Lampson valued at $300,000.

Warren also reported to council on the reconstruction of Esquimalt Road from Fraser to Admirals, carried out last month.

"Considerable portions of the sidewalk and curb and gutter were replaced and sections of the road base rebuilt prior to the final asphalt re-capping. Both the street planters and improved litter bins are on order and will be installed by the end of the month," he reported.

IWA Power Struggle Halts Union Business

VANCOUVER (CP) — The 34th annual convention of the International Woodworkers of America opened Monday with a power struggle that halted normal convention business.

IWA regional president Jack Moore was pitted against Syd Thompson, president of the powerful Vancouver IWA local.

The battle began when a motion was presented challenging Moore's appointment of IWA regional vice-president Wyman Trineer to the union's internatjonal executive board.

The appointment was challenged on grounds that the IWA constitution calls for convention ratification of such appointments and that no IWA member should be allowed to hold two elected positions.

Thompson supporters won a roll call vote 22,000 to 16,000. Convention delegates represent 40,000 woodworkers in Western Canada.

The vote was followed by a motion to open nominations for the international executive board position. This was ruled out of order by Moore, the convention chairman. He was supported on a show of hands but another roll-call vote was called.

Results of that vote should be known today but an unofficial count gave the anti-Moore forces a 2,000-vote victory.

Moore, in an interview, said he was confident his opposition would ease and let convention business continue.

He said: "You can't go on with this deal. This kind of game can go on only so far and even those supporting it will get tired of it."

Earlier, Moore warned that American-style wage and price controls should not be tried in Western Canada because labor was prepared to fight them.

Controls brought in by President Richard Nixon were inequitable and allowed the investor to continue to make large profits while the wage earner bore the weight of controlling inflation.

He said such controls destroy collective bargaining.

IBEW Asks 22% Pay Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — The International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers has presented wage increase demands to British Columbia Hydro totalling 22 per cent in a two-year contract retroactive to April 1.

Doug Cronk, business agent for IBEW Local 258, put forward the wage proposals Monday at an arbitration hearing before B.C. Supreme Court Justice Nathan Nemetz.

The hearing, which began last week, follows a four-day strike by the 2,400 IBEW workers employed by Hydro and nearly nine months of contract negotiations.

Cronk said the proposal would give Hydro employees wages more similar to those earned by linemen employed by the B.C. Telephone Co. The current $5.39-an-hour rate for Hydro linemen, roughly in the middle of the wage range, would be increased to $6.67 at the end of the contract.

The union is also seeking full payment of medical insurance premiums by Hydro, instead of the current 50 per cent, longer vacations, and the right to buy Hydro bus passes for $10 a year that is open to other Hydro employees.

Cronk agreed that the union gave up the bus passes for an extra two cents an hour in 1963.

In addition the IBEW wants double time for work on statutory holidays in addition to — instead of in exchange for — a day off in lieu.

It also wants accumulated unused sick leave entitlements towards earlier retirement.

Cronk is expected to wind up his submission today, then Hydro will present its case. Mr. Justice Nemetz's ruling will be binding on both parties.

Town Starts

LEAF RAPIDS, Man. (CP) — In separate ceremonies Monday, Manitoba Resources Minister Sidney Green officially marked the start of construction on this new town, about 500 miles northeast of Winnipeg and opened a new $1.2 million bridge over the Churchill River.

The town, being developed by a provincial crown corporation to house employees of Sherritt-Gordon Mines Limited's Rutan Lake mine, is expected to have a population of about 3,500 by 1973.

The official opening of the 425-foot bridge over the Churchill — to be known as the Kananskootik Bridge — came a year and a day after construction was completed, Oct. 17, 1970.

Strike Continues

EDMONTON (CP) — The 20,000 students in 60 schools north and west of Edmonton continued a forced holiday today as their teachers' strike went into its 12th day.

A contract proposal made by the provincial board of industrial relations was rejected Monday by the teachers.

D. J. Corse, teacher bargaining agent, said Monday the board's proposal was identical to the final offer made by the North Central West School Authorities' Association.

Housing Urged

REGINA (CP) — The biennial convention of the Royal Canadian Legion, Saskatchewan Command, Monday was urged to seek exclusive housing for aged veterans.

D. C. Bayliss of Assiniboia, Sask., chairman of the provincial housing committee, said a committee should be formed to investigate such homes with the results of the study presented to the federal government.

"I feel the department of veterans affairs should be involved in pure veterans housing in the same manner as they now are involved in providing housing for hospitalized veterans," Bayliss said.

Study Required

EDMONTON (CP) — Canada needs a national study into declining enrolments at universities and other post-secondary institutions, Dr. Max Wyman, president of the University of Alberta, said Monday.

Dr. Wyman said in an interview that he will ask the Association of Universities and Colleges of Canada to discuss the problem when it meets in Ottawa Nov. 1 to 4.

He said the study could determine if declining enrolments are a temporary phenomenon or something more permanent.

Tories Push Plan

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta's new Progressive Conservative government will implement a compulsory automobile insurance plan passed by the legislature earlier this year, Attorney-General Merv Leitch said Monday.

Leitch said the plan will come into effect April 1, 1972. It requires drivers to have a minimum $35,000 package of property damage and public liability insurance.

The plan also contains a no-fault clause.

Leitch said drivers will have to produce proof of insurance to buy 1972 vehicle plates.

Bank Robbed

COQUITLAM (CP) — Three masked robbers, one of them armed with a sub-machine-gun, escaped with about $23,000 Monday from a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada in this community near Vancouver.

A bank employee said he and a fellow worker stepped out for coffee before the bank opened for business and three men jumped out of a nearby car and pushed through the door.

He said one covered bank employees with the sub-machine-gun while the other two emptied tellers' cash drawers.

Police said two pistol shots were fired during the robbery to open a cash drawer.

7-Year Sentence

VANCOUVER (CP) — Marcel Servant, 41, was sentenced Monday to seven years for possession of heroin for the purpose of trafficking.

He was arrested last May after an undercover policewoman purchased drugs from a number of men. Police later seized 300 capsules of heroin in a raid on a Vancouver home.

Servant was convicted September 9.

Trial Delayed

VANCOUVER (CP) — The prosecution has won a one-week adjournment in the trial of two Vancouver men charged with possession of $750,000 worth of pearls stolen in a Seattle holdup-murder Dec. 22, 1969.

The trial of Eugene Killam, 30, and Barry Ehri, 32, was scheduled to being Monday before provincial court Judge Maurice Mulligan.

Prosecutor J. F. Rowan told the judge that investigations were continuing and "there is a possibility that other charges may be laid."

Mayor Hits Septic Tank Ruling

Mayor Jim Cumming of North Saanich is determined to stand up for old age pensioners living in Deep Cove whose septic tanks do not meet metro health board standards.

* * *

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, chief medical officer for Greater Victoria, ruled last week that a new health inspector will clamp down on unsanitary conditions in this area.

"I must defend those older residents from the arbitrary

man with a rule book," said Cumming.

Two years ago, explained the mayor, tests were conducted by the health board and as a result the municipality of North Saanich was told residents under the nuisance to take action against certain bylaw.

"I pointed out at that time that Whitbread had full authority to take action but he did nothing," said Cumming, who feels that the survey did not provide positive evidence of water pollution.

"If there is in fact an offence we will have to do something about it but we are not going to tear down someone's home," he said.

Some residences are classified as non-conforming, said Cumming, because they were built in Deep Cove long before the district was organized. But North Saanich can not legislate against this situation, added the mayor.

Rural Group Urges Control of Planning

A newly formed group in the unorganized areas west of Victoria wants zoning and planning powers for the Colwood, Metchosin and Langford territories but without municipal status.

The Glangcolme (Langford, Colwood, Metchosin) Chamber of Community Opinion has sent letters to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and to the Capital Regional District Board, which now controls zoning and planning in the unorganized territory, requesting that a referendum be held in December to decide whether residents want this degree of independence.

100 MEMBERS

"We think we represent the opinion of this area and we want to prove it by this referendum," said president pro tem Aubrey Jenkins in an interview.

He said his organization since its inception in August has 100 members and is shooting for 1,000 in an area that now has almost 20,000 residents and is growing faster than any municipality in Greater Victoria.

"We don't want a village at this time," Jenkins was quick to add, because "of the heavy headaches" municipal responsibilities bring on. "But we do want semi-village status."

"I suspect this is one or two people on an ego trip, with possibly a few followers," Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, chairman of the regional board, said. "But I don't know that for sure yet."

He said he would comment on the proposal after he discusses it with region officials this week. But he did say that the group would have to have "very good reason" to have the region abdicate the responsibilities handed to it by the provincial government.

Campbell's office said that a meeting will be arranged with the Glangcolme Chamber.

WELFARE FEAR

Jenkins pointed out that the last incorporation referendum in the unorganized territories was convincingly defeated in 1969, and contended that the main fear now towards any new movement to incorporation centres around welfare costs.

Because the area is "a little cheaper" to live in, it is "saddled with welfare cases."

The provincial government now absorbs the area's welfare costs and Jenkins says that many residents fear the mill rate will soar if the area becomes incorporated.

A provincial welfare spokesman said an up-to-date picture of the welfare situation is hard to determine but statistics for March, 1970, indicate the unorganized territories are a distant second to Victoria in welfare cases.

During that month the unorganized territory had 44 cases per thousand population, compared to Victoria's 68, Esquimalt's 34, Saanich's 24 and Oak Bay's 6.

The spokesman said, however, that each municipality pays the same per capita rate for welfare. He said he wouldn't predict whether incorporation would bring a higher welfare cost to the unorganized territory but "they would have a formalized bill."

The average mill rate for the unorganized territory — it varies from one to five mills from area to area — is 42, which includes the provincial government levy for roads, the education mill rate, and the regional board levy for planning, building inspection and some recreation projects.

MORE SERVICES

This compares to Victoria's 77.43 mill rate, which, of course, covers many more services than the unorganized territory has, from sidewalks to parks and sewage systems.

Jenkins said if the territory was allowed its own zoning controls, the idea would be to take over the present regional board offices in Langford but still receive the other services from the board.

McKinnon Refuses to Retract —No Trustee 'Slur' Intended

Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon refused at Monday night's board meeting to withdraw a statement which two trustees said cast a slur on members of the board.

Trustees Dr. Philip Ney and Walter Donald took exception to a statement by McKinnon after a special board meeting set for Sept. 27 was cancelled for lack of a quorum. Ney quoted McKinnon as saying trustees who did not attend did not think enough about their oath of office as trustees to attend the meeting.

TOO LATE

The meeting was intended to discuss strategy at the annual convention of the B.C. School Trustees Association which was held later that week. Four trustees — McKinnon, Peter Bunn, Dr. Carron Jameson and Mrs. Daphne Temple — attended the meeting.

DONALD
. . . took exception

Ney arrived too late to stop cancellation according to the board's bylaws. Dr. Harold Knight, Donald, Dr. Victor Rogers and Dr. Donald Shorting — who had recently broken his leg — were absent.

"I doubt very much that I shall retract that statement," McKinnon said. "It was intended as a compliment to those trustees who were there, not a slur on those who weren't there."

Donald said he considered McKinnon's statement "uncharacteristic", and agreed with Ney that it implies a slur on those trustees absent.

McKinnon replied that it would have been better for those trustees who could not make it to the meeting to telephone a message of their absence. He said he received one such phone call.

Ney asked that McKinnon record that he did not intend a slur on trustees, but no such action was taken.

"I do not feel obliged to retract that statement," McKinnon said. "You (Ney) are inferring something in it which you are entitled to infer."

Donald said trustees who did not attend "have been done a discredit" by McKinnon's remark and said he hoped not much attention would be drawn to the situation.

Ney said "it does nobody service to point the finger and imply that a trustee is not doing his job. I agree with Trustee Donald that this does a disservice to those who weren't here."

McKinnon said that when a person runs for public office, "he should acquaint himself with the demands of that office and should not expect to be able to change those demands after he is elected."

"I think the statement stands for itself fairly well," he said.

The discussion was ended with a motion from Jameson to discontinue.

BLAZE DAMAGE $2,000

Damage is estimated at $2,000 in a Monday night apartment suite fire at the Madrona Manor apartments, 1955 Ashgrove, deputy chief Carl Coates said today.

Coates said the blaze was confined to the chesterfield and carpet in the suite of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Krieg.

He said the tenants were out at the time of the blaze, about 10:30 p.m. There was smoke damage to other parts of the suite and the apartment hall.

Forestry Men Accused Of Gross Exaggeration

The B.C. forest industry was accused today of grossly exaggerating conservationists' proposals, seeking to include three Nitinat lakes in the Pacific Rim National Park and the widening of the Port Renfrew-Bamfield west coast trail.

"The forest industry is incessantly engaged in mud slinging tactics," said Rick Careless, president of the Victoria Chapter of the Sierra Club. "It speaks more for effect than accuracy."

He was referring to statements made by Gordon L. Draeseke at the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Forestry at the Empress Hotel Monday.

Draeseke indicated that conservationists are attempting to remove an additional 64,000 acres of forest land for park purposes and to preserve the area as a wilderness area.

He also said the proposed additional park area is almost impossible to traverse and would benefit few people.

"The Sierra Club is requesting 13,000 acres of land — the watershed of Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum Lakes — plus the widening of the trail where necessary," said Careless. "We have compromised, but Draeseke completely ignores this fact."

He also said the area had a "tremendous recreational potential" and is situated only a three-hour drive from Victoria and Nanaimo.

Careless also took Draeseke to task for assuming that the government could not convert the Tsusiat-Hobitan-Squalicum forest area from logging to recreation.

"This entire area is Crown-owned (public property)," he said. It's high time that the privately-operated forest industries realized that it is not their land."

He also noted that the area is unique — the last remaining watershed that is still virgin on the south half of Vancouver Island.

Ten thousand people in Victoria alone have endorsed preserving the area as a park and the technical advisory board of the capital region also support the proposal, he points out.

"Don't think that if the area is preserved it will only be the playground of a few," he said. "Future generations will have the opportunity to see a remaining specimen of something that our age has elsewhere destroyed."

Howard English, a director of B.C. Wildlife Federation, said the land had a higher value for recreational use than for forestry.

"People are pouring a lot of money into recreation," he said. "The demand for wilderness area—unspoiled land—is increasing throughout North America"

Five Weeks Before Quaffers Get Their Money's Worth

It will be at least another five weeks before beer drinkers get the bigger draught glass to hold the amount of beer they have been paying an extra nickle for since Sept. 1.

A B.C. Hotel Association spokesman said today a shipment of 420,000 new glasses is due to arrive Nov. 15 and to be in Vancouver hotels and beverage rooms on Nov. 29. She didn't know whether this would also be the date for the rest of B.C.

Association president Jim Vernon, who was unavailable for comment today, had said in mid-September that the new glasses would be out near the end of October.

He attributed the delay to the fact that a strike at the glass factory in Wallaceburg, Ont., had just ended. The same reason was cited today for the further delay.

Before Sept. 1, British Columbia Liquor Control Board regulations stipulated that eight ounces of beer were to be in 11-ounce glasses for a price of 20 cents.

At present this 11-ounce glass is supposed to contain nine ounces for a price of 25 cents. The new glasses will be of a 12-ounce size.

A Times survey of beer drinkers after the changeover indicated that some felt that there was the same amount of beer in the glasses after the price was up.

Extra Bus Run to Sooke

An extra run Friday evenings that will allow Sooke residents to spend more time in downtown Victoria has been added to the schedule of Sooke Stages Ltd.

A bus will leave Sooke at 6:30 p.m. and leave Victoria at 11:15 p.m. on the return journey. During the period between it will make two runs to Langford, one at 7:30 p.m. and one at 9:30 p.m.

Announcement of the new schedule was made Monday by James Golightly, formerly of Vancouver, who took over from the previous owner of the bus company, Roy Montgomery, July 1.

Golightly, who has replaced three of the five-bus fleet with new vehicles, says he plans to also expand his charter business.

arthur mayse

IF A VIRUS COULD BE transferred by telephone, I would gladly share what remains of mine with a caller who has just spent a quarter of an hour telling me that the country is on the skids. Anyone so preoccupied with doom-crying needs a dash of personal tribulation to distract his thoughts. And for that purpose, nothing can beat the common cold.

This nuisancy affliction knows neither time nor season, rhyme nor reason. The healthy-living aren't immune to it. It circulates from year to year in the classrooms of the young, and sets the old to sneezing.

And though its start isn't predictable, this you can count on: whether it's light or heavy, and no matter what easements you apply, it is going to run its course.

That isn't a happy thought, especially for the person with a cold coming on. When my wife and I faced a new day with sore throats about a week ago, we decided that we couldn't possibly be catching colds. Obviously, the trouble lurked elsewhere.

We began to cast around for possible explanations. I suggested it might be the Mackenzie Highway dust that our car still releases when a bump or a pothole jounces it.

"Or maybe it was something we both ate," my dear one speculated.

That struck me as a reasonable conclusion.

"I'll bet it was the pepperoni," I said.

We'd bought half a yard of the hell-fire sausage in a country store to sustain us through a day's ramble on the backroads. Win brought out the foot or so remaining, and we inspected it suspiciously.

There lay the culprit, we agreed, and the place for it was in the garbage.

That was a hasty decision, as we learned when our son pulled in at the end of the day. He had a sore throat, a headache, and no illusions about what had hit him.

"When a cold is going around," he said, "a teacher is a sitting duck."

So, I've noted, is practically everyone else. Perhaps a hermit on a desert isle, far removed from any contact with humanity, has a sporting chance to escape the nuisancy infection. But the infallible preventive has yet to be found, and if one virus doesn't get you, the chances are that the next one will.

I don't like to sound despairful, and perhaps tireless research will eventually come up with what ascorbic acid, vaccines and the leaf of the rare Chinese ginko tree have failed to deliver. This is a surefire gimmick that will head off or knock out the common cold . . . and it can't come too soon for the victim who is forced to recognize those first unwelcome symptoms.

Until such a wonder-cure does materialize, the philosophy I apply to the visitation that descends on me each year or two is direct and simple. It is based on the acceptance of two basic facts.

The first is that the person who insists on remaining vertical through a head cold isn't a hero but merely a germ-spreading nuisance who deserves the dark looks he gets.

The second is that I might just as well squeeze all the enjoyment I can out of my misery.

So, if at all possible, I put myself out of circulation with a pile of old outdoors magazines, binoculars to observe anything that may pass in the straits or roost in the trees, a box of tissues, and a supply of honey-and-lemon.

To make this homely place ho, squeeze the juice of lemon into jug, mug or glass, add a generous dollop of honey, and stir briskly. It may occur to you as you do so that a jigger of whisky and a dash of hot water would add to the soothing qualities of the mix.

Luckily at our place, colds when we get 'em don't develop at the same speed. I was up and about before Win's reached misery-stage, and Ron didn't surrender to his until later still.

None of us suffered the slightest loss of appetitite — it would take more than a common cold to bring that about — and we were sufficiently recovered to spare sympathy to a friend who dropped in last night.

He had a slight headache, and this puzzling little tickle in his throat. Could he be catching something?

Four Years Of Watching TV

CHICAGO (AP) — Studies have shown that a child spends more hours watching television before he goes to kindergarten than a student spends in the classroom in four years of college, says an Arizona pediatrician.

Dr. Gerald L. Looney of the University of Arizona, Tucson, told the annual meeting of the American Academy of Pediatrics that a pre-kindergarten child spends about 64 per cent of his waking time before a television set.

At most colleges, 16 classroom hours a week is considered a full load. This comes to far less time in the classroom than before the TV set if the 64 per cent figure is correct and assuming the average child is awake more than 25 hours a week.

Test-Tube Baby Work 'Unethical'

WASHINGTON (WP) — Dr. Robert Edwards, the leading experimenter in the production of test-tube babies, has vowed to continue his work while a panel of scientists and theologians called for him to stop.

"You can only go ahead if you accept the necessity of infanticide," Dr. James Watson, the Harvard molecular biologist who won the Nobel Prize for discovering the double helix structure of DNA, told Edwards.

"There are going to be a lot of mistakes," continued Watson. "What are we going to do with the mistakes? We have to think about some things we refuse to think about."

The debate took place during a panel discussion on "fabricated babies: the ethics of the new technology in beginning life" at the Joseph P. Kennedy Jr. Foundation recent symposium in ethics and medicine here.

Watson was joined by Dr. Leon Kass of the National Academy of Sciences and Dr. Paul Ramsey, a moral theologian from Princeton University who specializes in medical ethics, in the attack on experiments that could produce the world's first test-tube baby within a year.

'Plea Unacceptable'

The plea to stop experiments in test-tube babies was dismissed as "ultra-conservative" and "unacceptable" by Dr. Edwards of Cambridge University.

"Dogma that has entered biology from either communism or Christian sources has done nothing but harm," he said.

He and his colleague, Dr. Patrick Steptoe, are the leading researchers in the world in the techniques of producing test-tube babies.

So far, they have taken an egg from a woman's womb, fertilizea it in the laboratory with her husband's sperm and grown it until it was ready to be implanted back into the woman. But, Edwards said, they have not yet implanted the fertilized egg.

He defended his work as providing a way for some barren women to have children. These would be women whose fertile eggs are unable to get through blocked fallopian tubes to mate with their husband's sperm.

Edwards' work was defended by Dr. Howard Johns, the acting head of obstetrics and gynecology at Johns Hopkins University in Baltimore. He compared Watson's and Kass' call for a moratorium on research into test-tube babies to "the tribulations of Galileo" when he set-down natural laws of the universe.

'It's Unthinkable'

"It's unthinkable," Jones continued, "that there should be any area of scientific investigation set off limits."

Ramsey, Watson and Kass all raised the possibility that babies created by artificial fertilization in a laboratory will be deformed in some way by the process.

"The child to be," said Kass, "bears an unknown risk of harm." Ramsey said that no matter how many times Edwards and Steptoe tests the baby while it is in the mothers' womb they can never be sure he will be born normal because the last test might cause the malformation.

None of these researchers can exclude the possibility that they will do irreparable damage to the child to be," said Ramsey. In order to achieve fertilization, "scientists must mimic nature perfectly. The slightest lapse or mistake would be disastrous to a future possible human being."

Ramsey called the work by Edwards and Steptoe "unethical medical experimentation on future possible human beings, and therefore, it is subject to absolute moral prohibition."

Mrs. Wu Siu Wan inserts needle in woman's back at demonstration

It's 'Completely-Painless'

Acupuncturists feel a patient's pulse the way a concert violinist fingers the strings.

Centuries of tradition lie behind their touch.

Acupuncture — based on the belief that needles inserted in specific spots on a patient's body will stimulate his system to combat disease — has been used to diagnose and treat illness in china for more than 5,000 years.

Science Demonstrated

Mrs. Wu Siu Wan, who has practised the science in Canton and Hong Kong, discussed and demonstrated it Sunday at the Chinese Public School.

Acupuncture appears to have more in common with the practice of homeopathy than with modern western medicine.

While western medicine attacks the disease, or its symptoms, acupuncture concentrates on restoring the inner balance of the body. It is believed that when all organs are working properly there can be no disease.

Using only the pulse as a method of diagnosis, Mrs. Wan scored 100 per cent in pinpointing the ailments of volunteers.

The pulse is taken at three different points in the wrist — each indicating a different area of the body. Variations in the beat reveal the presence of disease in a specific location.

According to ancient theory, all parts of the body are linked by 12 meridians (paths of nervous energy) along which 300 insertion points are located.

Mrs. Wan said the meridians are divided into Yin, influencing internal illness, and Yang, exterior illness.

An acupuncturist must take into account not only the angle and depth at which the needle is inserted but also the season of the year and the temperature of the patient's normal environment.

"A northerner cannot be treated in the same way as a southerner," she said.

Acupuncture also uses moxa, a medicinal herb, burnt near the skin to stimulate body functions.

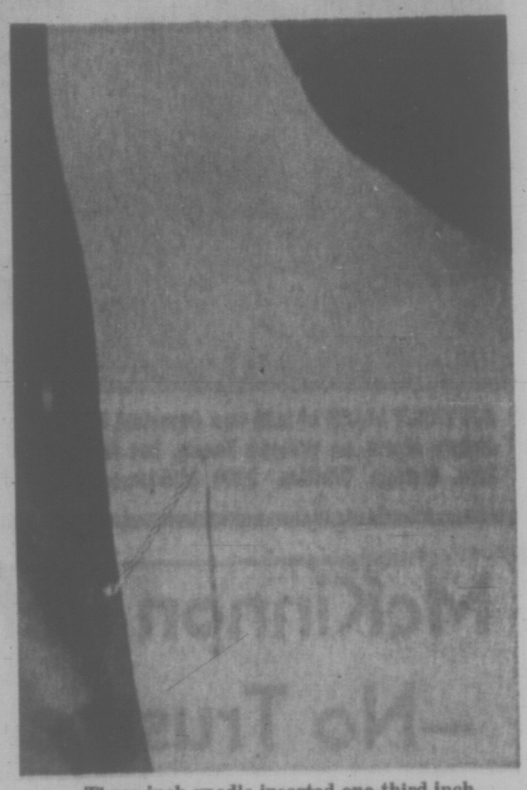
A middle-aged woman, who complained of backache, was treated with moxa, applied to the small of the back, and needles were inserted in the outer hollow of each knee.

She reported she "could feel the medicine passing through her body from one needle to the other."

Needles Inserted

A 48-year-old Caucasian male volunteered for treatment. Mrs. Wan described him as "excitable and having a very poor digestive system." She inserted two needles in his lower back — a process he described as "completely painless."

Several woman were diagnosed correctly but could not be treated at a public gathering for modesty reasons. They were obviously disappointed. One young woman intends to try again, when Mrs. Wan lectures at Craigdarroch College, University of Victoria Wednesday, 7:30 p.m.



Three-inch needle inserted one-third inch

For nine years she has had a constant headache that failed to respond to psychotherapy or a new cell-freezing operation for migraine.

She is "ready to try anything" in hope of relief.

Sex Education Campaign Planned

The newly-formed Birth Control Rights Committee will meet Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the University of Victoria's Student Union Building to plan a campaign for more sex education in the schools.

At a recent meeting, students representing the university and five high schools agreed to use the campaign format laid down by BCRC groups in Vancouver and Toronto.

During the first stages, a petition will be circulated among students in the area's schools. It will call for more sex education and birth control information.

When completed, committee representatives will present the petition to the Greater Victoria School Board.

Spokesman for the group, Barb Dunderdale, says the committee is hoping for support and contributions from both individuals and organizations.

She says it is also anticipating opposition from school board members and parents.

Expert Diagnoses Child's TV Viewing . . .

By ANN DUNSMUIR
Times Staff

Excessive television viewing and poor marks at school are not a matter of cause and effect, according to Dr. L. W. Axmaker, a psychologist with the Greater Victoria School Board.

Axmaker says poor marks and an addiction to television are both symptoms of an unhappy child.

"Excessive television watching is a symptom of some other problem," the psychologist said. For instance children who watch too much TV often don't get along with their families and have few friends.

"It's easier to attack television than to ask why some children would rather watch television than be with their families."

The psychologist thinks such children would find some other means of "escape" if television was not available."

He points out that children who think "no one cares about them" tend to do badly in school and use television as an escape from an unhappy situation.

"If my children are feeling unhappy or depressed they watch more television than they do ordinarily," Axmaker said.

"Television is a wonderful babysitter. Some parents find it easier to let children watch television than to become involved in activities as a family.

"Twenty years ago, families spent the evenings talking and doing things together," he continued. "Now they sit glued to the television set."

While this psychologist believes "children who have grown up on television have far more general knowledge than their parents did at a comparable age," he's concerned that children today may not be able to distinguish between reality and the fiction they see on television.

"Children can't distinguish real war on the news from fictional war in a television series.

"Parents must sit down and watch with their children and point out the difference between reality and fantasy.

"Children who watch television and have no discussions with parents about what they see can become very confused," Axmaker said.

The psychologist says television may given children the idea that "everything in life always has to be exciting and end happily" — but he's not too concerned about the effect of this on children.

"Children have always developed fantasies about life."

Axmaker worries more about television advertising than the quality of programs.

"So many advertisments try to con children into buying an expensive toy by making them think they will be the only one left out of the fun if they don't have it."

He thinks advertisers are storing up trouble for themselves.

"The next generation of adults should have much more sales resistence than their parents who weren't raised on television."

He thinks even very young children are catching on to the fact that television advertising promises much more than it delivers.

. . . And Two Mothers Tell How It Is

The viewing habits of Kelly Lenihan, 11, and his sister Kathleen, 9, bear out Axmaker's opinion that happy children don't watch an excessive amount of television.

When these children watch television, it's because there is a documentary or special that particularly interests them — and they watch as a family group.

Their mother, Mrs. Madge Garvan, 31, pointed out that her whole family loves sports and watches them together on weekends.

On week days, there isn't enough time for television.

"The children are involved in sports, and, by the time homework is done, there is only about half an hour left before bedtime," Mrs. Garvan said.

She said Kathleen hardly ever bothers with television but Kelly likes documentaries and science fiction.

"Sometimes Kelly will ask to watch television and I'll say 'no' because I know it's not something he's really interested in," Mrs. Garvan said.

This mother says her children have learned a lot from television.

"They know things about the world I didn't know at their ages. There's a lot of junk on television, but a lot of good information as well."

Mrs. Garvan thinks her children are old enough to know the difference between reality and fiction.

"I told my son to read about the Pakistani refugees after they were on the TV news," she said. "I think children need to know that these things are really happening."

When her children were small, she found television helped "keep the children quiet" while she prepared supper, but that this benefit was offset by toy and cereal commercials "aimed right at the children."

Mrs. Garvan resents the "fantastic toys" advertised at Christmas time on children's programs.

"On television the toy looks so big and fantastic. I know my children have been disappointed when they saw the real thing. The toy is nearly always smaller and more fragile than it looks in the commercial," she said.

These commercials have lost their influence now that the children are older," Mrs. Garvan said. "Now the kids recognize how phony the ads are."

Mrs. Carole Minckler is pleased that her children — Lera, 6, Glenn, 4, and Karolee, 2 — don't watch much television.

"Television makes idiots of kids," she said.

"Children watch programs like The Brady Bunch, where everything runs like clockwork, and can't understand why their own home isn't run the same way." Mrs. Minckler says that children tend to think that because something works on television it should work at home.

The Minckler children like to watch Disneyland on Sunday evenings and sometimes enjoy cartoons Saturday mornings.

"If it rains, they may watch the cartoons from 4 to 5 p.m. while I get dinner ready, Mrs. Minckler said, "but even then they usually only watch for a few minutes and then wander off to play with toys."

Mrs. Minckler thinks television commercials have more effect than programs on children. Her daughter, Lera, spotted a deodorant in a store and wanted to buy it because "that's the kind the octopus uses."

Like Mrs. Garvan, Mrs. Minckler objects to the toy commercials at Christmas.

"Kids get the idea that because television advertises a toy, their parents should be able to buy it," she said.

Mrs. Minckler's four-year-old son has a birthday just before Christmas. "He watches the commercials and changes his mind about what he wants a dozen times," she said. "It's a real nuisance."

'Beautify' Plan Essential For Victoria: Architect

A special commission whose sole aim is beautification of the Victoria area should be created by the provincial government, a visiting architect told a meeting here Monday.

John C. Parkin of John B. Parkin Associates of Toronto told members of the Men's Canadian Club that Victoria's "superlative setting" should not be sacrificed by following American architectural "tastemakers" and creating buildings that are unresponsive to peoples' needs.

"Good and bad architecture is not an option," said Parkin, who is president of the Royal Canadian Academy of Arts.

"Men who build bad buildings are bad governors," he added.

He said he "earnestly" urges the provincial government to create a provincial capital commission "singly and wholeheartedly dedicated to beautification."

The architecture of the 1960s has had "little concern for social relevance" and has been more concerned with "art for art's sake."

Architects should have been creating instead "shelter of a high quality."

Parkin said later in an interview the capital commission should take a form similar to the National Capital Commission in Ottawa, with long-range plans for beautifying the area in several ways. A firm, master plan is essential, he said.

A gradual program of acquiring property around the Inner Harbor would be a priority, he said. This would prevent speculation on land and prevent "ad hoc" development decisions.

Because the city is the capital of the province, he said, higher levels of government would share in the cost of the land.

Using Parkin's plans, by the year 2000, the whole Inner Harbor area would be developed in a co-ordinated way.

An architect who does not live up to his social responsibility raises "a very serious professional, ethical question."

Parkin said he thinks Victoria is "already threatened with the same degree of problems" as other North American cities.

Cities must pay close attention to the subjects of highrise buildings, utilization of waterfront property and parkland. Any development must always be tested against its effect on people.

"A city is for people," he said. "I think everything else is incidental."

Firm Offers Divorce, Holiday for $555

DETROIT (UPI) — Len Sands and his ex-wife, Jean, are in business together, offering customers a chance to combine a quickie divorce with a Caribbean holiday.

Their firm, Overnight Caribbean Divorce, opened for business this week with uncontested divorces in the Dominican Republic the stock in trade.

The suburban Birmingham firm advertises that its service will cost $555 per person, a fee which covers just about everything but round-trip transportation to the Dominican Republic. Customers would also have to pay separately for a lawyer to settle property and child support matters, which present most of the problems in divorce cases.

The $555 per person charge includes:

- A three-minute divorce ceremony in a Santo Domingo courthouse.
- Legal fees of two Dominican Republic attorneys.
- Court costs and filing fees.
- Registration of the divorce with the U.S. Consulate.
- A night in a luxury motel and some sightseeing tours.

The main snag, according to Mrs. Sands, is that "we are only operating on the assumption that a mutual consent divorce in the Dominican Republic will stand in Michigan."

The Sands say that to the best of their knowledge, a divorce in Santo Domingo has not been contested in a Michigan court since the Dominican Republic streamlined its divorce laws recently as a tourist attraction.

"We're not selling our package on the grounds that divorce is legal or illegal," said Mrs. Sands. "We're not guaranteeing anything."

DEAR ABBY

Real-Life Soap Opera

DEAR ABBY: My wife and I were very much in love when we married 12 years ago. She was brought up in one religion and I in another, so in order to be fair, we were married by a Justice of the Peace.

After our first baby came, she wanted it baptized (in her former faith) so I said, "Fine." Then she decided she wanted to attend her former church again. I said, "All right. Just don't start nagging me to go with you." She promised she wouldn't and she didn't.

Another baby. Another baptism. Pretty soon she started getting a ride to church and back with the man across the street who had the same kind of mixed marriage we had. (His wife didn't attend any church.)

Are you ahead of my story? You guessed it. My wife and this neighbor announced that they are "in love" and want to be free to marry each other.

If you can see the moral to this real-life soap opera, please put it in your column in capital letters! — Stupid.

DEAR STUPID: I see the moral. It's "Don't sell religion short. It isn't dead. It's only sleeping."

DEAR ABBY: Some years ago I used to stop at the bar in my office building every evening after work and have a couple of drinks with the fellows before coming home. The drinks were a dollar each.

About four years ago my wife made this proposition to me: She would buy the whisky by the case, and SELL it to me by the drink for 85 cents if I came straight home.

This worked out fine, and she bought many nice things with the profit.

Now, starting September 1st, she has upped the price to $1 a shot because of higher costs.

The problem. With the 90-day freeze announced by President Nixon, isn't she liable to a $5,000 fine? W.I.F.

DEAR W.I.F.: No. She's not a licensed retailer. (P.S. If your wife demands a tip, too, she not any cheaper than the bar, which could defeat her original scheme.)

CONFIDENTIAL TO MRS. J. T. G. IN RESTON, Va.: It's too late now. You should have told your host how you felt when he asked you to pay for your dinner and drinks.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif., 90069. For personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

A 'Plan' for Hitch-Hikers

D. N. Watson, president of Pacific Western Airlines, is distressed by all those long-haired hitch-hikers on Canada's highways — and not, apparently, because they're depriving him of business.

"Gentlemen, I am compelled to the completely unacceptable and unpalatable view that we should get some of the hitchhikers off the highways, which are unidentifiable as to male or female, and thrust them into the resource areas of this country," he told a Victoria Gyro Club luncheon meeting Monday.

Those who have worked hard to enjoy some of "this affluence to which we are properly entitled . . . have got to get off our butts and stand up and be counted if the hitch-hikers are not going to be taking over our cars and occasionally offering us rides."

Watson, who directed much of his speech attacking what he calls a trend to socialism in Canadian government, sees that such dealings with hitch-hikers will change a "completely unacceptable imbalance" in economy between countries like Canada and Japan.

"It is with no peculiar degree of pride that I indicate to you that in Canada 36 per cent of our gross national product goes to government . . . and yet for the most part people are prepared to consider it as a relatively fine form of democracy."

He compared this to the "most productive country in the world" — Japan — which only directs 16 per cent of its GNP to government.

He also said that Sweden, the socialists' "Shangri La", is in a "state of crises" as indicated by high prices and by what he says is a rate of 9 per cent of the population in many cities living on welfare.

"By 1985 their government will have boosted its claim on the national income from 45 to 58 per cent."

Watson also called for a new political party made up of the business community, which is "the strongest weapon in the arsenal democratic preservation."

"That is not a plug for Action Canada," he said in reference to the attempts at a political movement by ex-Liberal Paul Hellyer, which he denied belonging to in an interview earlier.

Watson paid a visit to Mayor Courtney Haddock of Victoria in his visit here from Vancouver to commemorate the one-year anniversary of PWA taking over the Island air franchise from Air Canada.

TOXIC PAINT FOUND

Children's Soap Being Recalled

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A children's soap product, "Peter Peter, Pumpkin Eater," is being recalled by its manufacturer because a small portion of its plastic packaging contains a paint that may be toxic if consumed.

The soap is sold door to door across the country and in Canada.

Edwin Pomerantz, vice-president for marketing for Vanda Beauty Counsellor, a division of Dart Industries Inc., said it was estimated that less than 10,000 units were sold because the product was introduced only recently.

"The green paint on the stem and leaves of the pumpkin shaped package contains a small quantity of lead," he said. "Even though it is extremely remote that a child chewing on the package would suffer any toxcidity, we are advising all distributors by telegram to make no further deliveries and recover all those products already sold."

He said the soap itself is pure and safe to use.

Second Life Lease For Oak Bay Glass

Oak Bay council voted Monday to allow Project Recycle the use of a municipality dump truck and driver to take a load of recyclable glass to Vancouver for disposal.

INSURANCE COVER

The truck and driver will be made available providing both are covered by insurance.

Earlier in the meeting it was suggested that a donation of $100 be given to the group to hire a truck.

Council altered this decision after Ald. Brian Smith and John Goult stressed that Project Recycle was not asking council for dollars, but participation.

Ald. Norman Pimlott felt the problem of recycling should become a provincial responsibility.

And Saanich municipality is also joining the growing ranks of the recycling enthusiasts.

Mayor Hugh Curtis told council Monday night he has authorized all municipal hall waste paper to be taken to the Project Recycle depot on Borden from Nov. 1.

LEADERSHIP

"This will amount to eight large plastic bags per day, about six or seven of which will be paper," Curtis said, noting that over the course of a year this would come to "a great deal" of reusable paper.

"I hope that once again we are showing some leadership in this respect," he said.

Saanich Job Bid Ready for Ottawa

Saanich council Monday night released details of a scheme of works which it hopes will be financed from Finance Minister Edgar Benson's job-creating program announced last week.

Included, said Mayor Hugh Curtis, are such proposals as clearing up lake frontage debris at Elk and Beaver lakes; restoration of Colquitz Creek, including installation of gravel on the stream bed and construction of a fish ladder to facilitate spawning; extensive improvements to the Cadboro Gyro Park and Gorge Park; tidying up beach access points, and construction of a walking trail round the perimeter of Cedar Hill golf course.

Ald. Edith Gunning asked if road works could also be included in the proposals, but municipal administrator John Tribe replied that this idea had been rejected because little labor is involved in such work, which is mostly done by machinery.

Curtis said a special committee, consisting of the chairmen of the council's public works, parks, finance and golf course committees, should be able to meet before the end of the week and "fire off our submission very quickly."

"I feel this is very much a first-come-first-served deal," he added.

In other business, council rejected two applications for rezoning property for medium density apartment use. One proposal was for a 50-unit apartment at Ralph and Carey; the other for a 53-unit apartment at Palo Alto and Cedar Hill Cross Road.

LAKES' WATER NOW SETTLED

Legal backing to the Central Saanich claim on Elk and Beaver lakes water rights has been received by Central Saanich council.

The "Final water licence" issued last week, dates the water usage permit from Dec. 31, 1875, and according to Ald. Don MacLaurin "gives Central Saanich prior right over all other claimants."

This municipality sells water in bulk to the B.C. Ferries and also to Sidney and North Saanich when wells supplying these areas run low.

Receipt of the licence strengthens Central Saanich hands, said MacLaurin, adding that "all expansion is linked to water supply."

The licence sets annual rental of the Elk-Beaver Lake water to Central Saanich at five cents per 1,000 gallons and permits use of 152 million gallons per year, not to exceed 1.5 million gallons per day.

B.C. Sends Pakistan More Aid

Britiss Columbia is sending another $10,000 worth of aid to Pakistan refugees, bringing the provincial aid total to $50,000, Agriculture Minister Cyril Shelford announced Monday.

Shelford also announced a total of $26,000 worth of aid to Peru in the form of plywood, powdered eggs and apple juice.

The minister said Pakistan aid will be partly money, partly powdered eggs and partly milk powder. It is being distributed through the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

Saanich Council Wit Calls Forth Praise

At least one Saanich resident is pleased with what the council is doing for the municipality, and he felt moved to write and express his appreciation.

In the letter which was read at Monday night's council meeting, Alan F. Ritz, 4201 Tyndall Avenue, said that in driving around the municipality he has noted with pleasure the many improvements to recreational facilities, including swimming pools, rinks, horseshoe pitches and golf courses.

He also commented favorable on the road works program, street lighting, sewers and "last but not least, the number of intelligent statements emanating from both the mayor and councillors, especially when these statements are compared to some issuing from other municipalities."

All these factors, Ritz said, lead him to believe "we are fortunate to have such a mayor and municipality."

Mayor Hugh Curtis, who had just finished presenting medallions to members of the McDonald's Bakery junior B lacrosse team, in recognition of their successful season, was jokingly asked by Ald. William Noel if he had a medallion to spare for Ritz.

Bennett Condemns Attack

Premier Bennett Monday deplored the attack on Russian Premier Alexei Kosygin by a Hungarian sympathizer in Ottawa.

Bennett said there are other ways to protest the policies of a foreign government.

"Whether it's the premier of Russia, whether it's the president of the United States, they're here as guests and they should be treated as guests," Bennett said.

OPENING DAY of Oak Bay's centennial branch library and new senior citizens' centre draws close and workmen hurry to try to meet the early December deadline for completion. Architects hope to have the project completed in time to have an official opening on Dec. 4.

School Trustees Cautious, Won't Quit Association Yet

Greater Victoria school board decided Monday night to delay a decision on whether to leave the B.C. School Trustees Association. A final decision will not now be made until committee chairmen report on effects of withdrawal.

VICTORIA SUCCESS

The question was brought up when trustees who attended the association's annual convention in Vancouver Oct. 3-6 gave reports of their experiences at the convention.

The committee chairmen will report back to the board at its November meeting, at which time a decision is likely.

Board chairman Allan McKinnon said the convention was a success for Victoria. Four Victoria motions were passed by the convention, one defeated and one referred to the next convention.

In addition, Victoria trustees were responsible for lopping $80,000 from the BCSTA budget, a saving for Victoria of about $1,500.

COMPLAINTS

Trustee Peter Bunn had two specific complaints about the convention.

One was that delegates were not able, and were not willing, to question candidates for executive positions with the association before they were elected.

Bunn said he wanted to ask questions regarding a study of the association's administration which he helped prepare during the summer and which the convention referred to the new executive for consideration and action.

About 65 per cent of the delegates voted to not ask questions of the executive candidates, a situation Bunn described as "incredible".

HESITANCY

The other complaint Bunn had was the convention's move to allow non-trustees to sit on the executive of the association.

Trustee Dr. Carron Jameson, who also attended the convention, said the BCSTA "should and could be a very strong organization in education in B.C.

He said he was not sure whether it would be best to withdraw support from the BCSTA to show the body Victoria is serious about its criticism, or to remain in the organization.

One aspect of the BCSTA the board rejected outright at its meeting was a teacher employment service.

COMPETENCY

The service was intended to provide a means for a school district to hire a teacher on short notice, and gave information on the teacher's competency in the form of a list of available teachers distributed through the province.

The board voted to discontinue participation in the service.

In other business, the school board:

● Passed a motion from Dr. Philip Ney that a second citizens' advisory committee be set up, with the subject How much time should children spend in school? The first advisory committee is meeting on the subject of corporal punishment in schools. No date was set for establishment of the second committee.

NITINAT PLAY AREA

● approved a motion from Jameson that the board ask the provincial government to set aside the Nitinat Triangle as a wilderness area for recreational use. Jameson said the board is always concerned with recreational facilities and the Nitinat area is one of the few virgin forestland areas left in the lower part of Vancouver Island.

● referred to its education committee a motion from Walter Donald to have the board begin a study into appointing one or two teachers to teach potential school dropouts. These teachers would not be attached to any one school, but would be available to students who needed them, Donald said.

SCHOOL SPACE

● referred ot the education committee a motion from Dr. Harold Knight that the board undertake a study of the use of space in schools, with an eye to using television programs for home learning, and a program whereby students would go to school part-time or take a year out. The motion also would ask the provincial government to conduct a similar study on a provincial scale.

Developer's Bid Fails in Council

A developer was criticized by Oak Bay aldermen and residents Monday night when he requested easing of restrictions laid down in a bylaw passed only two weeks ago.

Bob McAdams of Park Pacific Apartments Ltd. asked for relaxing of setback requirements for a 37-suite apartment building to be built on the southwest corner of Beach and Orchard.

Residents of the adjacent Vista Towers were out in force to protest that the smaller setback at one end of the building would deprive them and their neighbors of vistas and the sun.

Ald. John Goult said, "It is up to the developer to conform to the bylaw. It is not up to the municipality to conform to the developer."

BALCONIES

When asked by one resident whether the balconies of the building would be part of the site coverage or jut out, McAdams replied that balconies are not considered part of the site coverage.

Ald. Shirley Dowell retorted, "Not yet — but, boy, I'm sure going to work for it!"

McAdams contended that he needed the setback easement in order to stagger the building, to get away from the concrete block type of construction in favor of something more esthetically pleasing.

EXTRA STOREY

Goult asked, "Is it impossible to build something esthetically pleasing (within the bylaw restrictions) at a profit to you?"

Ald. Brian Smith said that he was convinced a pleasing building could be built within the existing setbacks. He reminded McAdams that in return for the extra five feet of setback required in the bylaw, developers were permitted to build four storeys instead of the old bylaw's three.

Ald. Douglas Watts, however, said he felt a building as proposed by McAdams was more attractive to the general public than "concrete cubes."

McAdams' request was referred to the zoning committee for further study.

Later in the meeting council was unanimous in passing a motion, made by Dowell to prevent developers lobbying individual council members when they wish to carry out construction that requires rezoning.

Dowell asked municipal solicitor D. M. Gordon whether having the motion included in a procedural bylaw would make it more binding.

"While it's here on the floor I want it made as tight and binding as it can be by law."

Gordon said ,that this was feasible and municipal administrator E. H. Hart was instructed to have the motion incorporated into the bylaw.

Smith questioned a proposal to share maintenance costs of school grounds with the Greater Victoria school board on a two-year trial basis.

Goult felt that two years were needed to try out the scheme.

The matter was referred back to the parks and recreation committee for further study.

Dr. Bennett, I Presume?

Oak Bay alderman Alan Hoey suggested Monday that Premier Bennett add the role of doctor to his duties.

Hoey spoke in condemnation of a recently-released report by the provincial government which accused doctors of undue delays in discharging patients from hospital.

The Oak Bay alderman said that the report, believed to have been based on a two-year-old survey of Victoria's Royal Jubilee Hospital, is inaccurate and incomplete.

"Everyone is quick to jump on the bandwagon. I suggest if you don't like doctors the next time you're sick phone the premier!"

MRS. OLIVE SANDFORD OF VICTORIA has been a Shell Heating Oil customer for more than 20 years.

Here's how she feels about the service she gets from Shell: "It's very satisfying. They give very good service and look after everything. So long as Shell does that, why would I change?"

Mrs. Sandford particularly likes her Shell agent's automatic delivery service. "I don't have to remember to order oil with them—it's just off my mind."

"They gauge the weather, and if we have very bad weather, well they'll just send the truck up in half the time." In all the years she has had Shell service, Mrs. Sandford has never had to phone for delivery.

If you'd like to have prompt, dependable oil delivery service—such as Mrs. Sandford has enjoyed for over 20 years—call your nearest Shell agent. Why not call him today?

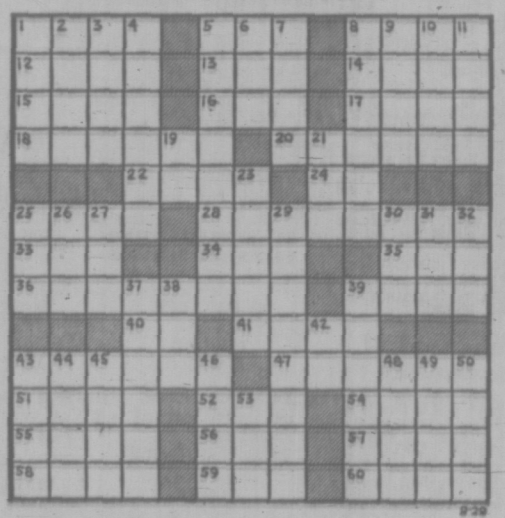
Answer to Previous Puzzle



THE BETTER HALF — By Bob Barnes

"Overwork!...Take a long vacation soon as you get my bill paid."

YOUR HEALTH Dr. Walter Alvarez

One of the ideas that we physicians and public health officials have gotten in the past few years is that of screening large groups of persons in order to find those suffering from chronic diseases that they do not suspect they have. For example, experts have concluded that there are perhaps several million persons walking around in this country with unrecognized diabetes. This can be dangerous, because if the diabetes is not recognized and treated quickly, and especially if it is of the severe type, the person can get a serious hardening of his arteries, a severe form of kidney disease, heart disease, and blindness.

That is why the Twin Cities Diabetes Association in Minnesota has a big bus containing a laboratory and equipment to test a person quickly for diabetes. They may park the bus outside a big factory and have all the employees go through the laboratory. Well-trained young women take a blood sample and then report to the person if the chemist finds a significant increase of blood sugar indicating a possible diabetes. There are many other such screening studies for specific diseases, such as tuberculosis or glaucoma (a serious disease of the eyes which, if not treated early, can produce blindness).

There has just come to my desk an interesting pamphlet entitled "Early Disease Detection — A New Way to Health," in which Edward Edelson describes a newly developed type of mass screening called Automatic Multiphasic Health Testing (AMHT). This fancy term simply means giving tests to detect several diseases in one session. The technique was pioneered at the Kaiser-Permanente Clinic in California. Medical technicians and nurses perform the essential tests and take a health history. They also use automated equipment and computers to get the results of the tests quickly.

Interestingly, of 31,843 persons tested at the Kaiser-Permanente Clinic, they found that only one out of every three persons tested was completely free of any signs of disease. One in 50 was found to have a previously undetected high blood pressure; one in 100 had a hidden diabetes; one in 300 had emphysema (a disease in which the lungs gradually lose their elasticity, making it difficult for the person to breathe); one in 500 had heart disease, and one in 600 had an unsuspected duodenal ulcer.

Similar tests are being made in other cities. For example, I read that in Richmond, Va., the Department of Public Health screened 60,000 persons in six months. Each day 400 persons were examined. The patients had an X-ray examination of the chest, a measurement of some elements in the blood; they had a test for syphilis, a blood-pressure reading, a test of visual acuity, and a very important measurement of the pressure within the eyeball (to see if the person had signs of glaucoma).

One problem is that once signs of disease have been found as a result of a screening program, there is no guarantee that the person will follow through and go to his physician for treatment. We physicians have the same problem with our patients. We cannot always get them to follow our directions or take the medicine we prescribe.

The advantage of the huge group type of testing is that it can save overworked physicians time. Few physicians care to take the time to give a complete physical examination, and few busy persons care to take time off from work to go into a hospital for the X-rays and tests, especially persons who are feeling well. Yet we all know how essential early diagnosis is — even before the person is aware of any symptoms — in such diseases as cancer, glaucoma and diabetes.

We have seen the death rate from uterine cancer among American women decrease greatly since gynecologists began routinely giving women a "Pap" test, which can show pre-cancerous changes in the cells of the uterus, thus enabling the woman to be treated before a cancer can grow and spread to other organs.

Multiphasic health screening can also save our country money. In a recent government report I read that some 67 million Americans suffer from at least one chronic condition, which costs the United States $59 billion a year. It makes much better sense to spend perhaps $2 billion to find the persons who are headed for serious trouble and who could perhaps have their good health and their life span extended by early recognition of their disease and good medical treatment.

Before the Judge

Judge Eugene Murphy sentenced two men with lengthy records to three months in prison for theft in Victoria provincial court Monday.

John W. Devine, 47, of 533 Comerford, and Roy William Lindley, 66, of 516 Yates, pleaded guilty to separate shoplifting offences.

Court was told that Devine took a pocket knife, valued at $2.25, from an Esquimalt Road hardware store about 1:30 p.m. Saturday.

He had convictions back in 1965 including several for theft as well as fraud and uttering.

Lindley, a security officer testified, was observed putting a clock-radio under his coat and leaving Simpson-Sears department store about 2:45 p.m. Saturday.

Prosecutor John Macintyre described the accused's record as "horrendous" and said since 1965 he has had six convictions for theft.

Steven G. Browne, 26, of 4143 Birtles, was fined $400 by Judge E. F. N. Robinson for driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

He was prohibited from driving for six months except when working.

David Hoffman, 23, of CFB Esquimalt, was fined $250 in court Saturday when he pleaded guilty to driving with a blood-alcohol content over .08 per cent.

Hoffman had a reading of .18 per cent when he was stopped by police at Kings and Dowler Place Oct. 15.

School Sewer Essential

Without sewers in the View Royal area, the school there will not be able to accommodate additional students, the Greater Victoria School Board advised the Capital Regional Board and View Royal residents Monday night.

New sewers are proposed for the area with a referendum on the issue soon in View Royal.

Additions and alterantions to View Royal Elementary have been planned for over a year, but with no sewers, the district will not go ahead with the work.

7 Victorians At Y Meet

Seven delegates from the Victoria YM-YWCA attended the first general meeting of the B.C. 'Y' Council held at Camp Elphinstone on Howe Sound.

Ten 'Y's were represented with delegates ranging in age from 16 to 70.

Featured speakers included Mrs. M. Chadsey, national YWCA president, and Rix Rogers, general secretary of the YMCA's national council, both of Toronto.

Victorian Elected

Stanley T. Mossop, 13 Vickery, Victoria, was elected area vice-chairman for southern Vancouver Island at the annual meeting Sunday of the B.C. Committee of the Air Cadet League in Vancouver.

Norman C. Bain of Nanaimo is chairman for the northern part of the island.

Michael C. Deane of North Vancouver was elected to a third term as chairman of the committee, which represents 2,500 air cadets in 38 squadrons in various parts of the province.

WOLVES SNAP CLAN STRING

MONMOUTH, Ore. (CP) — Oregon College of Education Wolves snapped Simon Fraser University Clansmen's 12-game winning streak Monday, scoring a 38-0 win in a non-conference football game here.

The Clansmen, who have won this season's last three games, haven't lost a football game since November, 1969. OCE's record this season is four wins in five starts.

Halfback Doug Price sparked the OCE attack with two touchdowns. OCE passed and ran for 331 yards while Simon Fraser was only able to manage 152 yards total offence.

Liquor Ad Ban 'Hurts Economy'

British Columbia's ban on liquor advertising may have created a dangerous hole in the economic fabric of this province, according to a Vancouver advertising executive.

"It is argued that the government is making up for much of this lost advertising revenue with their own campaigns," John G. Waters said Monday evening. "Some of them are quite useful, albeit hypocritical. But this doesn't do much for the struggling publications . . ."

"Where does it leave the many writers and artists whose future starts with these ventures? Many years hence we may suffer for this void in our literary efforts."

Waters, with the advertising firm of Vickers and Benson, was addressing local members of the Sales and Marketing Association.

The export of Canadian whisky, he said, plays an important part in Canada's balance of payments on the international market. "It is one of the largest fully-manufactured items shipped from this country," he said. Between $200 and $300 million is generated annually by the sale of Canadian whisky in the United States.

Waters stressed that liquor advertising, when it was still legal in British Columbia, did not invite people to start drinking. "It didn't even imply that. The advertisers and their agencies conscientiously adhered to that rule," he said. "The advertising was designed to have the reader switch brands."

Waters pointed out that the ban is not, and cannot be, total because of 31 million issues of magazines published outside the province and distributed in British Columbia every year.

"All including lots of beer, wine and liquor advertising. This begs the question that to ignore these 31 million impressions is no unlike an ostrich."

Waters drew attention to the recently concluded royal commission on liquor, which commented on the abuse of alcohol.

"The royal commission allowed advice from some of the most respected authorities in the world," Waters said. And it stated simply "liquor is no more the cause of alcoholism than marriage is to divorce or automobiles to accidents. This is not to deny that the abuse of beverage alcohol contributes to family problems or car accidents, but let us remember that is the abuse."

Governments, Waters said, will continue their incursions into the private sector.

"We can expect closer attention from the competition act, the truth in advertising, false packaging and other aspects of consumerism.

"No doubt these are well-intentioned moves to protect the consumer, but at what point is our freedom to select violated?"

If any good has come out of B.C.'s liquor advertising ban, Waters said, it is that "we will be seeing less of that ridiculous disclaimer." This presentation is not published or displayed by the Liquor Control Board of British Columbia.

"It was, and is, so preposterous, so useless, so downright silly that we shouldn't be wasting our time talking about it."

Decision Later In Kuster Appeal

Judgment was reserved by Mr. Justice David Verchere in B.C. Supreme Court today on a motion to quash the Dale Kuster arbitration.

In a three-hour hearing Saanich Firefighters Union lawyer Dermod Owen-Flood argued that the arbitration board erred in law in its decision.

Kuster was dismissed from the Saanich fire department June 30, 1970.

The majority of the three-man arbitration board in effect upheld his dismisal by finding the union had delayed 10 months in proceeding, to the point where the employer was prejudiced, and that it was not open for the union to pursue the matter.

The board did not hear the merits or otherwise of the dismissal.

The union's motion to quash the board's decision, if successful, would open the way for a new arbitration to consider the case on its merits.

ERRED IN LAW

Owen-Flood said the majority of the arbitration board erred in law in deciding that the delay factor applied without reference to what Kuster's employment was terminated.

"To determine whether delay applies, you must look at the whole of the merits," he said.

"If delay had any bearing, it is only to the question of the remedy for Kuster's dismissal."

He said there is no time limit in the union's greivance procedure for processing cases, other than a five-day limit for a dismissed employee to serve notice, which Kuster did.

Louis Lindholm, representing Saanich municipality, said many of the arguments advanced by Owen-Flood "are not such to which this court can take cognizance."

The issue is whether the legal doctrine of delay applies to labor arbitration cases "and I say it does."

He said the grievance "should be brought within a reasonable time after a violation has occurred."

There was no discretion open to the arbitration board for payment of less than full back wages, less money earned at other employment, he said, referring to the prejudice the employer could suffer if Kuster was ordered reinstated to his job.

Boy Wounded

A 15-year-old boy is in fair condition in hospital today with a bullet wound suffered on a family hunting trip Sunday morning in Sooke.

Police said Gordon Oliver Stone, 584 Whiteside was chasing a deer when he was hit with a bullet from a .44-calibre rifle.

The bullet passed through his right arm and lodged in his chest.

RCMP said the boy was a member of a six-member party, all related, who went hunting about 6:45 a.m. Sunday.

Accused Returned To Alberta

A 21-year-old man arrested last week in Victoria following Telex message from Alberta and remanded in custody to await a warrant for armed robbery was returned Monday to Edmonton to face the charge.

An Edmonton policeman arrived to escort Ronald Brian Cunningham, 139 Menzies, back to the Alberta capital.

Cunningham was remanded for six days last Friday in the custody of the Victoria city police chief to await the warrant the telex message said was following.

Judge William Ostler earlier ruled that police were acting properly in arresting the man on the strength of the Telex when they were satisfied the warrant was following as quickly as possible and they believed they had the right man.

Ostler used a section of the Criminal Code to give the six-day remand.

Cunningham was arrested Oct. 9 on a Victoria charge of possession of heroin, marijuana and LSD. He was released on $2,000 bail only to be arrested following the Telex message from Edmonton city police.

HOME GARDEN

Labelling Useful

By HILDA BEASTALL

While digging the ground in preparation for planting something new in fall, one often comes across nests of bulbs. At this time they will have clusters of short new white roots which identify them as spring flowering bulbs.

Especially in a garden recently taken by a new owner, these bulbs pose two problems: What are they? What shall I do with them now?

Neighbors may be quick to tell you the garden had always been full of spring bulbs, but are less than likely to be more specific.

If you have ready a prepared strip or patch of ground that is well drained in winter, it will be a good idea to plant the bulbs you unavoidably dig up now into this place.

Keep the bulbs in their clusters with all the soil attached and replant each group at once before the tiny hair roots (which you cannot see) dry out in the air. Put them in with about three inches of soil above the tips.

Unless you are familiar with all types of spring bulbs from constant handling at all stages of growth, it is more than a little difficult to identify those you discover in a garden new to you.

In your own established garden you remember, hazily at least, that daffodils were here, and tulips over there.

But what are all these little things?

For a newcomer to gardening, transplanting into a separate patch of ground now will mean identification in spring when flowering. Replanting can be done next fall where wanted.

Daffodils and other narcissi have light gold colored, scaly coats and are now likely to have also white growth tips showing at the top of the bulbs.

The bulbs may be of any size or shape, according to variety and age, in groups or as singles.

The only similar bulb in appearance is the fall blooming yellow Sternbergia lutea, whose top growth will be much more advanced since it blooms in late October into November.

Tulips have dark brown coats all in one piece (not scaly). Small bulbs are completely detached, although in the same grouping.

Crocuses, all kinds—fall, winter or spring—have netted (or reticulate) coverings, and are corms rather than bulbs. Color is light brown.

Large white scaly bulbs often with purple base markings, are likely to be hyacinths; while pure white small scaly bulbs may be any of the spring blooming scillas, ipheions, muscari or chionodoxas.

Whatever you dig up in your preparations, be sure they are back into soil as quickly as possible, without damage or drying of those precious roots.

Wife Going Along

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Richard Nixon has confirmed that she will be going with the president on his trips to the Soviet Union and China.

"Oh, sure," she replied when asked if she plans to make the trip to Moscow in May. She said she will join the president when he visits mainland China before May.

Karpin on Bridge

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal features a recurring position that is frequently mishandled by the non-expert player. If a reason could be assigned for the mishandling, it would be that one has the instictive impulse to win as many tricks as possible. The expert has learned to suppress this instinct, for he appreciates that the safety of his contract is the prime consideration; and he never tries to make an extra trick if, in so trying, he jeopardizes his contract. This deal is a case in point.

Both sides vulnerable. North deals.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ♣	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ♡.

South's response of three notrump was the "book" bid: it showed a hand with which South, had he been the first to speak, would have been opened with one notrump.

On West's opening heart lead East put up the ten, which South captured with his queen. The queen of clubs was then led, and the finesse taken against West's hoped for king. When East's king took this trick, the eight of hearts was returned, entrapping South's K-7. West now cashed five heart tricks and declarer was down two.

Had declarer looked ahead — before playing to the first trick — he would have recognized that if West possessed the club king, the sailing would be smooth and pleasurable. In this case, declarer would bring home six club tricks by repeated finesses.

The "worry" on the hand should have been that East possessed the club king. And since declarer knew that he was going to take a club finesse, there wasn't a thing he could do about preventing East from making his club king, if East had that key card. But what declarer could have attempted to do was to prevent East from returning a heart.

He could have accomplished this by permitting East to win the opening lead. East would then play back the heart eight, South would put up his queen, and West's ace would win. South would now be home.

The question might be raised: "What if East had three hearts?" In this case, when East returned a heart at trick two, West would allow South's queen to win. When East later obtained the lead with his club king, the return of his remaining (theoretical) third heart would defeat declarer.

This is quite true. But, then, if East had a third heart, by proper defensive play declarer would always be defeated, whether he won the opening lead, or didn't. By correct play, declarer would always make his contract if the contract were makable.

KRISTIANSAND, Norway (Reuter) — A depth charge went off accidentally on a Dutch destroyer Monday, killing two sailors and injuring 10. Fire broke out on the destroyer, the Friesland, but was quickly put out.

Nursing Home Sex Defended

SPOKANE, Wash. — The plight of the elderly virile man has been put forward at a meeting of Washington nursing home staff by Salt Lake City geriatrician Dr. Victoria Kassell. Too often, Kassell claims, nursing home staff, and the general public too, regard their "sexy senior citizens" in too puritanical a light. Studies show that men are normally sexually active until their 70s and 80s. On the drink taboo, Kassell is equally firm. "Vitamins don't stimulate appetite, only a dry wine or a well-mixed martini can do that."

TEEN-AGE SMOKERS STILL ON INCREASE

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. government says more teen-agers are smoking cigarettes at a time when the number of adult smokers is decreasing sharply.

The government estimates the number of smokers between 12 and 18 years of age at four million in January, 1970, up one million in two years when the population increase for the group was less than a million.

The report makes no effort to explain the increase but analyzes the characteristics of teen-agers who have and have not become regular smokers.

"While there are r[illegible] factors in the environ[illegible] a child that influence t[illegible]ng up or not taking up the [illegible]ok far the most influence is the smoking behavior of those ing habit, the one that has by around him."

PARENTS INFLUENCE

The lowest level of smoking is found among teen-agers who live in households where both parents are present and neither smokes, and who have older brothers and sisters, none of whom smoke, the report says. In such a situation, it says, only 4.2 per cent have become regular smokers.

In families with at least one parent and one older brother or sister who smoke, 24.9 per cent of the teen-agers also smoke.

The report was prepared by the national clearing house for smoking and health, a branch of the health, education and welfare department. It is based on surveys made in January, 1968, and January, 1970.

It estimates that in 1970, 18.5 per cent of boys 12-18 were regular smokers, up from 14.7 per cent in 1968. For girls, the figures is 11.9 per cent in 1970 and 8.4 per cent in 1968.

The clearing house figures for the adult population show 42 per cent of the men smoked in 1970, compared with 51.9 per cent in 1966; and 31 per cent of the women, compared with 33.7 per cent in 1966.

ALDERMEN ANNOUNCE THEY'LL RUN AGAIN

At least two Central Saanich aldermen will stand for re-election in December.

Ald. Percy Lazarz and Ald. Ken Stanlake, both announced their decisions this week to try for another two-year term, while Ald. Don MacLaurin has reserved comment.

Council formally acknowledged a request from Saanich school board that election to fill trustee position be included in the municipal election.

Loyal Hearts In Esquimalt

Esquimalt municipal council is unanimously in favor of retaining the monarchy.

The question arose and was quickly disposed of at Monday's regular council meeting, as a result of a letter from Mrs. G. Campbell, 1189 Munro St.

"In view of the manner in which our flag was changed, and how everything of true moral value being in danger of being taken from us," she wrote, "we must make absolutely sure how the politicians at all levels of government . . . are going to vote if and when the question of the monarchy comes up."

Council responded with alacrity, and Mrs. Campbell will be assured by letter that when the issue arises, Esquimalt's elected officials will be with the monarchy.

New Citizens Welcomed

Camosun Votes Again

Camosun College students will vote for the second time to elect a student government president today and Wednesday after a vote last week was invalidated.

Ballots from the first vote were counted and destroyed, making it impossible for the runner-up to have a recount made.

Elections to other positions will stand, with only voting for the president being done again.

In the first vote, Wayne McStavick defeated Roberta Colli, 173 to 117.

Firemen Put Out Fire Then Resumed Strike

MONTREAL (CP) — Some 50 to 60 firemen, members of the striking Montreal Firemen's Association, responded to an emergency call by their newly-appointed fire chief Rene Plaisance early today, and rushed to subdue a blaze in a three-storey building in west-end Montreal.

The men were meeting to discuss their wage dispute with the City of Montreal when the emergency call came. It was the first test of authority for Chief Plaisance, appointed temporary chief Monday with authority to order 700 firemen from suburban municipalities as well as the Montreal force to fight any emergency blaze.

But suburban firefighters were not needed as the "volunteer" firemen from the Montreal force left their study session, rushed to pick up heavy firefighting equipment and battled the raging blaze for two hours.

The fire caused heavy damage to the building, left 15 families homeless, and slightly injured several firemen.

The strike, involving 2,400 firemen, still continued, however, as firefighters began returning to their study session after the fire was brought under control. The men have been defying since Thursday a court injunction ordering them back to work.

Meanwhile, Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer said Monday he is prepared to step into the dispute, but first the men must go back to work.

The strike, called to back up demands for wage parity with Toronto firemen, is now in its sixth day.

"They've decided to stay in study sessions," said Mr. Cournoyer. "I don't think it was wise of them to do that."

Mr. Cournoyer said he cannot assign someone from his department to the dispute "until some people change their way of looking at it."

He said he isn't criticizing firemen for their salary demands, but rather for staging a walkout.

DEMANDS RETURN

Mr. Cournoyer mediated in a dispute early this month between provincial police and the province, which ended in a settlement Oct. 2, almost a week after the men staged a 36-hour walkout.

Gerald Niding, the city's executive committee chairman, also emphasized Monday negotiations can begin "only if the men go back to work."

Mr. Niding's statement was a reversal of his declaration last Thursday when he said "My door is always open. . . . If they want to see me, all they have to do is ask."

Meanwhile, seven firemen were to appear in court before Judge Leon Lalande Wednesday on charges of violating the injunction ordering the men back to work.

The seven accused firemen were chosen to appear by the city, Michel Cote, chief counsel for the city, said Monday. Any of the 2,400 strikers may be called before the court on the charge however, and face a maximum penalty of $50,000 fine and one year in jail.

Mr. Plaisance, a former division chief in east-end Montreal, was appointed by the Montreal Urban Community following the resignation earlier Monday of city fire chief Elphege Hamel, 54, for health reasons.

The city's offer of a 7.1-percent wage increase "is not necessarily our final offer," said Mr. Niding. The increase would bring the salary of a first-class fireman to $10,050, up from $9,385, but still $600 short of wage parity with Toronto.

MPs Stall on First Clause In Lacklustre Tax Debate

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commons debated the 707-page tax bill in desultory fashion Monday and stalled on the first clause.

The government said nothing, apparently waiting for agreement on time allocation for the debate.

Meetings of party House leaders aimed at finding some way of allocating debating time so that the bill would not be hogtied for months were started before the weekend. Its provisions are supposed to be in effect Jan. 1.

But no progress was apparent, and a source said that no arrangement could be reached because of the stance Monday of Marcel Lambert, Conservative financial critic.

Although the bill is supposed to be at the detailed clause-by-clause stage of discussion, debate ranged widely Monday because that opening clause has 257 parts.

The opposition hammered once again at the way the bill would treat family farmers, co-operatives, the wage-earner, the small businessman—all topics of discussion since the legislation was unveiled last June 30.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson and Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), his parliamentary secretary, sat throughout the debate without offering anything more than the occasional interjection or jibe.

The bill would raise basic personal tax exemptions: to $1,500 a year from $1,000 for single persons and to $2,850 from $2,000 for a married couple.

But it also would classify as income—and tax for the first time—such things as unemployment insurance benefits and company contributions to health plans on behalf of employees.

It also introduces a tax on capital gains.

A person's house and up to an acre of surrounding land would be exempt from the capital gains levy, but Stanley Korchinski (PC—Mackenzie) said this amounted to unfair treatment of the family farmer.

DETAILS COMPLAINT

Only the land immediately around the farm house would be exempt from the gains tax and farmers would not see this as tax reform, he said. Farm houses, unlike urban homes, often dropped in value but the farmer still would be taxed on his land, the thing most likely to have appreciated in value.

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) said that while with raised exemptions about 750,000 Canadians would be dropped from tax rolls, tens of thousands living in poverty would still have to pay taxes.

And the increase in exemption levels—the first change in 22 years — came nowhere near matching the increased cost of living over the same period.

Several opposition members urged the government to drop the provision that co-operatives and credit unions be treated in about the same way as corporations.

If it weren't for co-ops, many Canadians would be in the clutches of finance company loan sharks Mr. Orlikow said. Alf Gleave (NDP—Saskatoon-Biggar) said co-ops and credit unions filled a needed gap between the chartered banks and finance companies and should be encouraged—not penalized— in any tax legislation.

Storm Socks City

The first storm of the season pummelled the British Columbia coast Monday night and this morning with gale-force winds reaching their peak shortly after midnight when gusts of 67 miles an hour were recorded at Gonzales Hill.

The storm drove three vessels onto rocks and left an aftermath of power failures, telephone outages and driveways blocked with fallen tree limbs.

A crew of 12 B.C. Hydro linemen worked through the night to restore power in many parts of Greater Victoria with the hardest-hit area being Cordova Bay.

The coast guard cutter Racer went to the rescue of a fish boat that was swept onto the rocks at Broken Island, halfway between Campbell River and Alert Bay at 11:30 Monday. Her owner was taken off and landed at Alert Bay.

This morning, five vessels, including the Racer, were standing by another fish boat that was holed by rocks at Hansen Island, across from Alert Bay, at 4:45 a.m.

FIVE PEOPLE

A 40-foot ketch with five people aboard hit a reef on De Courcy Island. She was eventually pulled free by a tug from Ladysmith.

Chief weather officer Allan McQuarrie reports that the storm, which had been heading toward the Washington coast, veered, and gathered force and swept over Vancouver Island.

"It picked up speed dramatically," he said, "giving the Island a full blast overnight."

During the night the barometer dropped to 29.03.

NEWS BRIEFS

Surcharge May Be Lifted On Selective Basis—U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Treasury Secretary John B. Connally says the United States would "consider" lifting the 10-per-cent import surtax on a "selective basis."

A statement issued Monday by the treasury department said selective "could mean a country by country basis and/or a product-by-product basis."

The statement was issued in response to a number of queries that arose from a midnight news conference which Connally gave Friday in a Hot Springs, Va., hotel lobby after a speaking engagement.

Meanwhile, in Paris officials from western nations were meeting with spokesmen from the United States in an effort to sort out trade differences. See story on Page 2.

ERRONEOUS REPORTS

A report in European newspapers that Connally and West German Finance Minister Karl Schiller had agreed in principle two weeks ago to exempt West Germany from the surcharge were termed "completely erroneous" by the treasury. The statement added:

"Connally said in an impromptu news conference in Hot Springs last Friday night that the West Germans 'have much on their side' when they suggest they are entitled to have the surcharge removed from their products.

COMMON FRONT

"In his news conference the secretary also noted that the group of six Common Market countries has indicated it wants to negotiate as a common front with the U.S., but that members of the six apparently have not reached agreement among themselves on their position."

Denmark today imposed an additional levy on imports to help it out of its balance-of-payments difficulties.

Finance Minister Henry Bruenbaum told parliament the surcharge would be in force until March, 1973, and would have three phases — first at 10 per cent, then at seven per cent, effective June, 1972, and at four per cent for the last three months.

Free Vote Rejected

LONDON (CP) — A demand that the Labor Opposition allow a free vote on the crucial Common Market entry issue was rejected by the socialist Parliamentary party today as Harold Wilson sought to prevent a split in party ranks.

First reports indicated that the socialists defeated market supporters in their own party by 150 to 111 to reject the free vote move.

The final Labor strategy on the six-day Common Market debate to end with the critical Oct. 28 vote is to be set by the Opposition Chief Whip Bob Mellish Thursday.

However, the size of the force demanding the free vote — which Prime Minister Heath has already yielded for his own Tory party—indicated there may still be a Labor split Oct. 28 unless Wilson provides some last-minute compromise.

Protests Growing In Kosygin Tour

GREENPEACE CREW INVITED TO JUNEAU

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace protest mission has switched its homeward bound schedule and accepted an invitation to visit Juneau, state capital of Alaska.

Mrs. Dorothy Metcalfe, communications contact for the 13-member protest group, said Monday they were invited to Juneau by a state legislative member, Ed Maughton, while en route home from a voyage to protest a planned U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island.

The group began its voyage to protest a planned U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island.

The group had originally planned to sail for Prince Rupert from Kodiak, Alaska. They had been expected to reach home by the end of the month.

Province Vetoes Welfare Raises

The provincial government has turned down a substantial increase in welfare rates provincial boards of review in Vancouver recommended be given to two families.

However, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said today he is willing to meet representatives of two Vancouver welfare review boards which failed to win increased assistance rates, but the minister offered no hope that he would alter department policy on welfare payments.

The cases involve Mrs. Toni Cowlishaw, a mother of six daughters, who won a review board decision that her monthly welfare rate be raised from $341 a month to $491, and Mrs. Jean Amos, a mother of two, who was permitted an increase from $181 to $274.

Peter Davies, chairman of the Cowlishaw review board, said he received a letter Monday from J. A. Sadler, the director of the department of rehabilitation and social improvement, saying:

"I am not prepared to implement the decision as I consider it to be contrary to departmental policies."

Davies, a community worker with the First United Church, said Mrs. Cowlishaw's welare money was increased because her family was being deprived of a "normal and healthy existence."

Davies and Prof. William Black, chairman of the Amos board, said Monday they would reconvene their boards to determine whether to press the mothers' cases further.

In an interview from Vancouver, Gaglardi said appeal boards have no power to force higher welfare payments.

Demonstrators By the Busload

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Demonstrations against Premier Alexei Kosygin were growing today and there were indications that the visiting Russian would face protesters throughout his Canadian tour.

A human barricade of police, two deep in places, cordoned off an entire block surrounding the Soviet Embassy as thousands of Jewish demonstrators gathered in nearby Strathcona Park.

Police had counted 110 busloads from Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and other points, with more coming, as a 1½-mile protest march was to begin.

A convoy of 55 buses from Montreal was stopped three times by Quebec police and searched after reports that some protesters had bombs. None was found.

Meanwhile, small groups of protesters continued to pop up everywhere Kosygin went.

The RCMP and the Soviet KGB security force appeared to have redoubled their efforts to avert another incident. The 67-year-old premier was nearly bowled over by a young Hungarian Monday.

Kosygin Reacts Coolly To Arctic Control Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin reacted cooly today to a Canadian proposal for an international treaty on navigation safety and pollution control in the Arctic.

Canadian sources said the idea, advanced as Mr. Kosygin and Prime Minister Trudeau formally conferred for the second time in two days, drew less than a "wholehearted" response.

Elaborating, the sources said the premier's reaction was "somewhat of a repetition" of the position he took when Mr. Trudeau proposed a variation of the same idea in Moscow in May.

At that time, Mr. Kosygin made clear that the Soviet Union is not interested at present in a multilateral regime for problems of the Arctic.

U.S. CONSULTED

Canada's plan, worked out in close consultation with the United States, called for an international conference to write controls into international law.

The Soviets feared that a multilateral approach might undermine Russia's own claim to sovereignty in the Soviet Arctic.

To get around this objection, Mr. Trudeau today proposed that a treaty be worked out by countries with interests in the Arctic, without the benefit of a conference. The treaty could then be thrown open for signature by other states.

Though showing little enthusiasm for the idea, Mr. Kosygin promised that his goverment would take it under consideration.

DISCUSS TRADE

Today's 2½-hour talk between Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Trudeau concentrated on bilateral issues affecting Canadian-Soviet relations, though the two also dealt for a time with international questions left over from Monday.

Much of the discussion was taken up with trade and economic matters. The two leaders agreed the industrial exchanges agreement between Canada and the U.S.S.R. signed early this year is working well.

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis, one of a number of cabinet ministers who sat in on the talks, expressed concern about intensive fish-harvesting operations by foreign fleets, including Soviet, off Canada's east and west coasts.

Mr. Davis said Canada would like to see the problem dealt with on an international basis.

Mr. Kosygin said the Soviet government will consider the matter.

Officials said today's exchange of views was "solidly business-like and serious" and there was no evidence that Monday's attack on Mr. Kosygin by a Parliament Hill demonstrator had affected the progress of talks.

"It was an easy exchange, good dialogue back and forth," said one official.

EXCHANGE TOASTS

Monday night, Mr. Kosygin and Mr. Trudeau exchanged champagne toasts to Soviet-Canadian friendship at a glittering banquet capping Mr. Kosygin's first, event-filled day in Canada's capital.

The dinner was attended by about 200 persons in the ornate Confederation Room of

'I Fed Him Coffee and Kept Talking'

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year-old airline stewardess on her first flight has been credited with the safety of an Alaskan airlines crew and 31 passengers hijacked at gunpoint to Vancouver Monday.

Nancy Davis of Seattle, who joined Wien Consolidated Airlines in Anchorage, Alaska, two weeks ago, said she was "very frightened" throughout the ordeal, "but I just fed him coffee and tried to keep him talking as much as I could."

The suspect is expected to be deported to Alaska to face charges of air piracy.

Miss Davis said the hijacker first approached her to ask where the washroom was, shortly after the flight left Anchorage for Bethel, Alaska, about 5:30 a.m.

CONFRONTED WITH GUN

"I was up front in the galley when he came out. He walked up and stuck a gun in my face and said: 'We're not going to Bethel.' He said he was hijacking the plane.

"I told him not to say such things, but then he demanded I take him into the cockpit. I told him it was locked and that because I was a junior stewardess I didn't have a key."

She said at that point she rang the cockpit on an intercom system, indicating an emergency to the pilot, Captain Don Peterson, through a code system.

IN AIR 25 MINUTES

Captain Peterson, 43, of Fairbanks, Alaska, said this occurred about 25 minutes after the flight left Anchorage.

"He started banging on the door when we first refused to let him in," Captain Peterson said, adding that finally the door was opened.

"He came in and demanded that we head south. We discussed the range of the aircraft and its fuel and agreed that we would return to Anchorage to refuel and disembark passengers."

Captain Peterson said the hijacker stayed in a cabin just behind the cockpit with his gun pointed to Miss Davis's head.

"He always had his finger in the trigger," she said. "I asked him if he had real bullets in it and he took one out and showed it to me. But he assured me he had the safety catch on."

Captain Peterson said the hijacker asked to go to Havana after leaving Anchorage for Vancouver.

"I told him we could make Mexico City from Vancouver and that seemed to satisfy him for a while, and that we would go on to Cuba from Mexico.

"As we got nearer Vancouver he seemed totally undecided as to what to do next."

ASKS FOR LIQUOR

Miss Davis said the hijacker asked her if there was any liquor on board and "I told him there wasn't any because it was a morning flight. Actually I lied because we had a full cupboard. So I gave him coffee and we talked. He said he was frightened about going back to jail."

Miss Davis said she understood from his statements that he had served time in Leavenworth prison on a murder charge.

"We talked about his different philosophies. He was very down on life, depressed. At one point he asked me what I was thinking about. I told him I was praying for him.

"He said no one had ever done that for him before. I said everybody needs some one to pray for you.

"Then he showed me pictures of his family. He kept telling me how calm I was. My stomach was practically upside down but I guess it didn't show."

HIJACKER DECIDED

Captain Peterson said that after the jet refuelled and had left Vancouver, "it was the hijacker's decision to return to Vancouver."

"I can only speculate that his reason was because he was frightened. It had something to do with an incident at Anchorage this morning before we left.

"Apparently he was accosted by security police at the airport, and they made reference to his past police record," Captain Peterson said.

"I don't really know why, but it was his decision to return. He had refused to talk with RCMP in Vancouver earlier, and had become very nervous afterward. He was totally undecided about what to do.

"And he was adamant about not landing in the U.S."

HE LIKED HER

Miss Davis said the hijacker "liked and trusted" her. "I'm sure he wouldn't have hurt me intentionally unless something made him upset.

"When he talked to me he seemed to calm down. I felt like crying when it was all over—like crying for him."

Asked whether she would continue her career as a stewardess, Miss Davis smiled and gave an emphatic, "Yes. But right now I'm hungry—no, make that starved. I haven't eaten a thing all day and I'm starved."

FBI ACTION TRIGGERED DEATHS OF 3 PEOPLE

There are only two endings to air piracy for the crew of the commandeered plane . . . rescue or death.

Protests Growing In Kosygin Tour

Storm Socks City

The first storm of the season pummelled the British Columbia coast Monday night and this morning with gale-force winds reaching their peak shortly after midnight when gusts of 67 miles an hour were recorded at Gonzales Hill.

The storm drove three vessels onto rocks and left an aftermath of power failures, telephone outages and driveways blocked with fallen tree limbs.

A crew of 12 B.C. Hydro linemen worked through the night to restore power in many parts of Greater Victoria with the hardest-hit area being Cordova Bay.

The coast guard cutter Racer went to the rescue of a fish boat that was swept onto the rocks at Broken Island, halfway between Campbell River and Alert Bay at 11:30 Monday. Her owner was taken off and landed at Alert Bay.

This morning, five vessels, including the Racer, were standing by another fish boat that was holed by rocks at Hansen Island, across from Alert Bay, at 4:45 a.m.

FIVE PEOPLE

A 40-foot ketch with five people aboard hit a reef on De Courcy Island. She was eventually pulled free by a tug from Ladysmith.

Chief weather officer Allan McQuarrie reports that the storm, which had been heading toward the Washington coast, veered, and gathered force and swept over Vancouver Island.

"It picked up speed dramatically," he said, "giving the Island a full blast overnight."

During the night the barometer dropped to 29.03.

GREENPEACE CREW INVITED TO JUNEAU

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace protest mission has switched its homeward bound schedule and accepted an invitation to visit Juneau, state capital of Alaska.

Mrs. Dorothy Metcalfe, communications contact for the 12-member protest group, said Monday they were invited to Juneau by a state legislative member, Ed Maughton, while en route home from a voyage to protest a planned U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island.

The group began its voyage Sept. 17 to protest a planned U.S. underground nuclear test on Amchitka Island.

The group had originally planned to sail for Prince Rupert from Kodiak, Alaska. They had been expected to reach home by the end of the month.

Demonstrators By the Busload

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Demonstrations against Premier Alexei Kosygin were growing today and there were indications that the visiting Russian would face protesters throughout his Canadian tour.

A human barricade of police, two deep in places, cordoned off an entire block surrounding the Soviet Embassy as thousands of Jewish demonstrators gathered in nearby Strathcona Park.

Police had counted 110 busloads from Ottawa, Montreal, Toronto and other points, with more coming, as a 1½-mile protest march was to begin.

A convoy of 55 buses from Montreal was stopped three times by Quebec police and searched after reports that some protesters had bombs. None was found.

Meanwhile, small groups of protesters continued to pop up everywhere Kosygin went.

The RCMP and the Soviet KGB security force appeared to have redoubled their efforts to avert another incident. The 67-year-old premier was nearly bowled over by a young person Monday.

Strathcona Park is about 100 yards from the Soviet Embassy. Organizers said 7,000 to 9,000 protesters were in the park and more were coming as those there sang and listened to speeches.

Cries of "let my people go" and "free Soviet Jewry" could be heard blocks away. But organizers continued to emphasize that the demonstration would be peaceful.

Province Vetoes Welfare Raises

The provincial government has turned down a substantial increase in welfare rates provincial boards of review in Vancouver recommended be given to two families.

However, Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi said today he is willing to meet representatives of two Vancouver welfare review boards which failed to win increased assistance rates, but the minister offered no hope that he would alter department policy on welfare payments.

The cases involve Mrs. Toni Cowlishaw, a mother of six daughters, who won a review board decision that her monthly welfare rate be raised from $341 a month to $491, and Mrs. Jean Amos, a mother of two, who was permitted an increase from $181 to $274.

Peter Davies, chairman of the Cowlishaw review board, said he received a letter Monday from J. A. Sadler, the director of the department of rehabilitation and social improvement, saying:

"I am not prepared to implement the decision as I consider it to be contrary to departmental policies."

Davies and Prof. William Black, chairman of the Amos board, said Monday they would reconvene their boards to determine whether to press the mothers' cases further.

Surcharge May Be Lifted On Selective Basis—U.S.

WASHINGTON (CP) — Treasury Secretary John B. Connally says the United States would "consider" lifting the 10-per-cent import surtax on a "selective basis."

A statement issued Monday by the treasury department said selective "could mean a country by country basis and/or a product-by-product basis."

The statement was issued in response to a number of queries that arose from a midnight news conference which Connally gave Friday in a Hot Springs, Va., hotel lobby after a speaking engagement.

Meanwhile, in Paris officials from western nations were meeting with spokesmen from the United States in an effort to sort out trade differences. See story on Page 2.

ERRONEOUS REPORTS

A report in European newspapers that Connally and West German Finance Minister Karl Schiller had agreed in principle two weeks ago to exempt West Germany from the surcharge were termed "completely erroneous" by the treasury. The statement added:

"Connally said in an impromptu news conference in Hot Springs last Friday night that the West Germans 'have much on their side' when they suggest they are entitled to have the surcharge removed from their products.

COMMON FRONT

"In his news conference the secretary also noted that the group of six Common Market countries has indicated it wants to negotiate as a common front with the U.S., but that members of the six apparently have not reached agreement among themselves on their position."

Denmark today imposed an additional levy on imports to help it out of its balance-of-payments difficulties.

Finance Minister Henry Bruenbaum told parliament the surcharge would be in force until March, 1973, and would have three phases — first at 10 per cent, then at seven per cent, effective June, 1972, and at four per cent for the last three months.

Free Vote Rejected

LONDON (CP) — A demand that the Labor Opposition allow a free vote on the crucial Common Market entry issue was rejected by the socialist Parliamentary party today as Harold Wilson sought to prevent a split in party ranks.

First reports indicated that the socialists defeated market supporters in their own party by 150 to 111 to reject the free vote move.

The final Labor strategy on the six-day Common Market debate to end with the critical Oct. 28 vote is to be set by the Opposition Chief Whip Bob Mellish Thursday.

However, the size of the force demanding the free vote — which Prime Minister Heath has already yielded for his own Tory party—indicated there may still be a Labor split Oct. 28 unless Wilson provides some last-minute compromise.

Mayor Hits Septic Tank Ruling

Mayor Jim Cumming of North Saanich is determined to stand up for old age pensioners living in Deep Cove whose septic tanks do not meet metro health board standards.

* * *

Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread, chief medical officer for Greater Victoria, ruled last week that a new health inspector will clamp down on unsanitary conditions in this area.

"I must defend those older residents from the arbitrary

man with a rule book," said Cumming.

Two years ago, explained the mayor, tests were conducted by the health board and as a result the municipality of North Saanich was told residents under the nuisance to take action against certain bylaw.

"I pointed out at that time that Whitbread had full authority to take action but he did nothing," said Cumming, who feels that the survey did not provide positive evidence of water pollution.

"If there is in fact an offence we will have to do something about it but we are not going to tear down someone's home," he said.

* * *

Some residences are classified as non-conforming, said Cumming, because they were built in Deep Cove long before the district was organized. But North Saanich can not legislate against this situation, added the mayor.

Rural Group Urges Control of Planning

A newly formed group in the unorganized areas west of Victoria wants zoning and planning powers for the Colwood, Metchosin and Langford territories but without municipal status.

The Glangcolme (Langford, Colwood, Metchosin) Chamber of Community Opinion has sent letters to Municipal Affairs Minister Dan Campbell and to the Capital Regional District Board, which now controls zoning and planning in the unorganized territory, requesting that a referendum be held in December to decide whether residents want this degree of independence.

100 MEMBERS

"We think we represent the opinion of this area and we want to prove it by this referendum," said president pro tem Aubrey Jenkins in an interview.

He said his organization since its inception in August has 100 members and is shooting for 1,000 in an area that now has almost 20,000 residents and is growing faster than any municipality in Greater Victoria.

"We don't want a village at this time," Jenkins was quick to add, because "of the heavy headaches" municipal responsibilities bring on. "But we do want semi-village status."

"I suspect this is one or two people on an ego trip, with possibly a few followers," Mayor Hugh Curtis of Saanich, chairman of the regional board, said. "But I don't know that for sure yet."

He said he would comment on the proposal after he discusses it with region officials this week. But he did say that the group would have to have "very good reason" to have the region abdicate the responsibilities handed to it by the provincial government.

Campbell's office said that a meeting will be arranged with the Glangcolme Chamber.

WELFARE FEAR

Jenkins pointed out that the last incorporation referendum in the unorganized territories was convincingly defeated in 1969, and contended that the main fear now towards any new movement to incorporation centres around welfare costs.

Because the area is "a little cheaper" to live in, it is "saddled with welfare cases."

The provincial government now absorbs the area's welfare costs and Jenkins says that many residents fear the mill rate will soar if the area become incorporated.

A provincial welfare spokesman said an up-to-date picture of the welfare situation is hard to determine but statistics for March, 1970, indicate the unorganized territories are a distant second to Victoria in welfare cases.

During that month the unorganized territory had 44 cases per thousand population, compared to Victoria's 68, Esquimalt's 34, Saanich's 24 and Oak Bay's 6.

The spokesman said, however, that each municipality pays the same per capita rate for welfare. He said he wouldn't predict whether incorporation would bring a higher welfare cost to the unorganized territory but "they would have a formalized bill."

The average mill rate for the unorganized territory — it varies from one to five mills from area to area — is 42, which includes the provincial government levy for roads, the education mill rate, and the regional board levy for planning, building inspection and some recreation projects.

MORE SERVICES

This compares to Victoria's 77.43 mill rate, which, of course, covers many more services than the unorganized territory has, from sidewalks to parks and sewage systems.

Jenkins said if the territory was allowed its own zoning controls, the idea would be to take over the present regional board offices in Langford but still receive the other services from the board.

McKinnon Refuses to Retract —No Trustee 'Slur' Intended

Greater Victoria school board chairman Allan McKinnon refused at Monday night's board meeting to withdraw a statement which two trustees said cast a slur on members of the board.

Trustees Dr. Philip Ney and Walter Donald took exception to a statement by McKinnon after a special board meeting set for Sept. 27 was cancelled for lack of a quorum. Ney quoted McKinnon as saying trustees who did not attend did not think enough about their oath of office as trustees to attend the meeting.

TOO LATE

The meeting was intended to discuss strategy at the annual convention of the B.C. School Trustees Association which was held later that week. Four trustees — McKinnon, Peter Bunn, Dr. Carron Jameson and Mrs. Daphne Temple — attended the meeting.

DONALD
. . . took exception

Ney arrived too late to stop cancellation according to the board's bylaws. Dr. Harold Knight, Donald, Dr. Victor Rogers and Dr. Donald Shorting — who had recently broken his leg — were absent.

"I doubt very much that I shall retract that statement," McKinnon said. "It was intended as a compliment to those trustees who were there, not a slur on those who weren't there."

Donald said he considered McKinnon's statement "uncharacteristic", and agreed with Ney that it implies a slur on those trustees absent.

McKinnon replied that it would have been better for those trustees who could not make it to the meeting to telephone a message of their absence. He said he received on such phone call.

Ney asked that McKinnon record that he did not intend a slur on trustees, but no such action was taken.

"I do not feel obliged to retract that statement," McKinnon said. "You (Ney) are inferring something in it which you are entitled to infer."

Donald said trustees who did not attend "have been done a discredit" by McKinnon's remark and said he hoped not much attention would be drawn to the situation.

Ney said "it does nobody service to point the finger and imply that a trustee is not doing his job. I agree with Trustee Donald that this does a disservice to those who weren't here."

McKinnon said that when a person runs for public office, "he should acquaint himself with the demands of that office and should not expect to be able to change those demands after he is elected."

"I think the statement stands for itself fairly well," he said.

The discussion was ended with a motion from Jameson to discontinue.

BLAZE DAMAGE $2,000

Damage is estimated at $2,000 in a Monday night apartment suite fire at the Madrona Manor apartments, 1955 Ashgrove, deputy chief Carl Coates said today.

Coates said the blaze was confined to the chesterfield and carpet in the suite of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Kieg.

He said the tenants were out at the time of the blaze about 10:30 p.m. There was smoke damage to other parts of the suite and the apartment hall.

Forestry Men Accused Of Gross Exaggeration

The B.C. forest industry was accused today of grossly exaggerating conservationist's proposals, seeking to include three Nitinat lakes in the Pacific Rim National Park and the widening of the Port Renfrew-Bamfield west coast trail.

"The forest industry is incessantly engaged in mud slinging tactics," said Rick Careless, president of the Victoria Chapter of the Sierra Club. "It speaks more for effect than accuracy."

He was referring to statements made by Gordon L. Draeseke at the annual convention of the Canadian Institute of Forestry at the Empress Hotel Monday.

Draeseke indicated that conservationists are attempting to remove an additional 64,000 acres of forest land for park purposes and to preserve the area as a wilderness area.

He also said the proposed additional park area is almost impossible to traverse and would benefit few people.

"The Sierra Club is requesting 13,000 acres of land — the watershed of Tsusiat, Hobitan and Squalicum Lakes — plus the widening of the trail where necessary," said Careless. "We have compromised, but Draeseke completely ignores this fact."

He also said the area had a "tremendous recreational potential" and is situated only a three-hour drive from Victoria and Nanaimo."

Careless also took Draeseke to task for assuming that the government could not convert the Tsusiat-Hobitan-Squalicum forest area from logging to recreation.

"This entire area is Crown-owned (public property)," he said. It's high time that the privately-operated forest industries realized that it is not their land."

He also noted that the area is unique — the last remaining watershed that is still virgin on the south half of Vancouver Island.

Ten thousand people in Victoria alone have endorsed preserving the area as a park and the technical advisory board of the capital region also support the proposal, he points out.

"Don't think that if the area is preserved it will only be the playground of a few," he said. "Future generations will have the opportunity to see a remaining specimen of something that our age has elsewhere destroyed."

Howard English, a director of B.C. Wildlife Federation, said the land had a higher value for recreational use than for forestry.

"People are pouring a lot of money into recreation," he said. "The demand for wilderness area — unspoilt land — is increasing throughout North America.

Five Weeks Before Quaffers Get Their Money's Worth

It will be at least another five weeks before beer drinkers get the bigger draught glass to hold the amount of beer they have been paying an extra nickle for since Sept. 1.

A B.C. Hotel Association spokesman said today a shipment of 420,000 new glasses is due to arrive Nov. 15 and to be in Vancouver hotels and beverage rooms on Nov. 29. She didn't know whether this would also be the date for the rest of B.C.

Association president Jim Vernon, who was unavailable for comment today, had said in mid-September that the new glasses would be out near the end of October.

He attributed the delay to the fact that a strike at the glass factory in Wallaceburg, Ont., had just ended. The same reason was cited today for the further delay.

Before Sept. 1, British Columbia Liquor Control Board regulations stipulated that eight ounces of beer were to be in 11-ounce glasses for a price of 20 cents.

At present this 11-pounce glass is supposed to contain nine ounces for a price of 25 cents. The new glasses will be of a 12-pounce size.

A Times survey of beer drinkers after the changeover indicated that some felt that there was the same amount of beer in the glasses after the price was up.

Extra Bus Run to Sooke

An extra run Friday evenings that will allow Sooke residents to spend more time in downtown Victoria has been added to the schedule of Sooke Stages Ltd.

A bus will leave Sooke at 6:30 p.m. and leave Victoria at 11:15 p.m. on the return journey. During the period between it will make two runs to Langford, one at 7:30 p.m. and one at 9:30 p.m.

Announcement of the new schedule was made Monday by James Golightly, formerly of Vancouver, who took over from the previous owner of the bus company, Roy Montgomery, July 1.

Golightly, who has replaced three of the five-bus fleet with new vehicles, says he plans to also expand his charter business.

IF A VIRUS COULD BE transferred by telephone, I would gladly share what remains of mine with a caller who has just spent a quarter of an hour telling me that the country is on the skids. Anyone so preoccupied with doom-crying needs a dash of personal tribulation to distract his thoughts. And for that purpose, nothing can beat the common cold.

This nuisancy affliction knows neither time nor season, rhyme nor reason. The healthy-living aren't immune to it. It circulates from year to year in the classrooms of the young, and gets the old to sneezing.

And though its start isn't predictable, this you can count on: whether it's light or heavy, and no matter what easements you apply, it is going to run its course.

That isn't a happy thought, especially for the person with a cold coming on. When my wife and I faced a new day with sore throats about a week ago, we decided that we couldn't possibly be catching colds. Obviously, the trouble lurked elsewhere.

We began to cast around for possible explanations. I suggested it might be the Mackenzie Highway dust that our car still releases when a bump or a pothole jounces it.

"Or maybe it was something we both ate," my dear one speculated.

That struck me as a reasonable conclusion.

"I'll bet it was the pepperoni," I said.

We'd bought half a yard of the hell-fire sausage in a country store to sustain us through a day's ramble on the backroads. Win brought out the foot or so remaining, and we inspected it suspiciously.

There lay the culprit, we agreed, and the place for it was in the garbage.

That was a hasty decision, as we learned when our son pulled in at the end of the day. He had a sore throat, a headache, and no illusions about what had hit him.

"When a cold is going around," he said, "a teacher is a sitting duck."

So, I've noted, is practically everyone else. Perhaps a hermit on a desert isle, far removed from any contact with humanity, has a sporting chance to escape the nuisancy infection. But the infallible preventive has yet to be found, and if one virus doesn't get you, the chances are that the next one will.

I don't like to sound despairful, and perhaps tireless research will eventually come up with what ascorbic acid, vaccines and the leaf of the rare Chinese ginko tree have failed to deliver. This is a surefire gimmick that will head off or knock out the common cold . . . and it can't come too soon for the victim who is forced to recognize those first unwelcome symptoms.

Until such a wonder-cure does materialize, the philosophy I apply to the visitation that descends on me each year or two is direct and simple. It is based on the acceptance of two basic facts.

The first is that the person who insists on remaining vertical through a head cold isn't a hero but merely a germ-spreading nuisance who deserves the dark looks he gets.

The second is that I might just as well squeeze all the enjoyment I can out of my misery.

So, if at all possible, I put myself out of circulation with a pile of old outdoors magazines, binoculars to observe anything that may pass in the straits or roost in the trees, a box of tissues, and a supply of honey-and-lemon.

To make this homely place bo, squeeze the juice of lemon into jug, mug or glass, add a generous dollop of honey, and stir briskly. It may occur to you as you do so that a jigger of whisky and a dash of hot water would add to the soothing qualities of the mix.

Luckily at our place, colds when we get 'em don't develop at the same speed. I was up and about before Win's reached misery-stage, and Ron didn't surrender to his until later still.

None of us suffered the slightest loss of appetitite — it would take more than a common cold to bring that about — and we were sufficiently recovered to spare sympathy to a friend who dropped in last night.

He had a slight headache, and this puzzling little tickle in his throat. Could he be catching something?
